Chapman Says Moth Resistance To DDT Growing

Condon Testifies

Rep. Robert L. Condon (D.-Calif.) denies categorically in testimony before a Congressional committee in Washington that he is now or ever was a Communist or Communist sympathizer. The 41-year-old legislator appeared before the Senate-House atomic energy committee at his own request. Condon was denied access last summer to an atomic test in Nevada.

Others Discuss Use of Materials for Fruits; Meeting Scheduled

Codling moth seems to be "on the verge" of becoming resistant to DDT, Dr. P. J. Chapman, head of the entomology department at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, said here this morning, declaring that it would be "a near calamity" if this actually happens.

Dr. Chapman addressed members of the New York State Horticultural Society at the armory during the opening session of the society's Eastern meeting. The meeting continues through Friday noon.

Resistance of the codling moth to DDT was first noted in Ohio last season, Dr. Chapman revealed. DDT has been the growers' mainstay against the pest.

Research at Geneva will be intensified to replace DDT when it becomes necessary, he said.

Mite Resists Phosphate

Another pest, European red mite, resisted phosphate materials in only one Hudson Valley apple orchard in 1952, but last season about 10 additional orchards were involved, the entomologist reported. To avoid the new threat, he advised the use of not more than two applications of phosphate materials a season.

"Resistance can be postponed by use of an early oil spray," he advised.

Another apple pest, plum curculio, is on the increase, warned Prof. Ralph W. Dean of the Hudson Fruit Investigations Laboratory at Poughkeepsie. He spoke this morning during a discussion of the apple spray program.

Arsenate Found Good

"Many growers still find lead arsenate satisfactory for their conditions. Others are using a lead arsenate - DDT combination successfully," he reported. His recommendation was methoxychlor or dieldrin for the "real curculio problem orchards."

Prof. Dean said that heretofore dependable insecticides failed to give good protection under the severe conditions last spring largely because of delayed application of the petal-fall spray.

Prof. A. A. LaPlante of the entomology department at Cornell considered parathion ideal for insect control, but new information on its use "requires us to include a number of reservations along with recommendations," he said. Extreme care in handling is necessary because of its danger to man, he said, and the effectiveness of fungicides for apple scab may be reduced if parathion is applied near the time of a severe scab infection period.

Prof. LaPlante cautioned: "If a considerable primary infection has occurred, parathion sprays might result in an increase in scab throughout the remainder of the season."

Under some conditions foliage of McIntosh and related varieties may be injured by parathion sprays, he said.

Other Discussions

Also on this morning's program were discussions of peach and prune insect control by E. H. Smith of Geneva and brief talks by Sieg Lienk and Ed Glass on other aspects of the apple spray program. Abram Van Alstyne of Kinderhook was chairman of the morning program.

The afternoon session will be chaired by James R. Clarke of Milton and will be devoted mainly to marketing.

D. M. Dalrymple, secretary-treasurer of the society, announced today that a meeting, not on the printed program, has been scheduled for 4:30 p. m. today at the Governor Clinton Hotel, during which Hudson Valley growers interested will discuss the trends in marketing resulting from the increased use of modified atmosphere storages.

Throughout the three days of the meeting, the drill shed and adjoining rooms at the armory will be filled with commercial and educational exhibits related to the fruit industry. This exhibit is open to the public.

Competitions Scheduled

In conjunction with the meeting, 4-H area Future Farmers of America members from the valley area will be competing in pie baking contests, disease and insect identification and apple judging competitions. The pie baking and apple dish demonstrations by 4-H Club girls is scheduled to take place on Thursday in the gun

FTC Will Probe Coffee Prices, Is President's Stand

Investigation to Check Whether Any Laws Violated—Backs Secretary

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Eisenhower said today the Federal Trade Commission will make a full scale investigation of rising coffee prices.

The President told a news conference the commission launched a preliminary inquiry Jan. 13 and already has discovered enough to warrant a full investigation.

Such an inquiry, he added, is going to take place.

Retail prices for coffee have lately jumped above $1 a pound and wholesalers have predicted a further rise.

The trade commission's investigation will be aimed at determining whether any laws have been violated.

The President said the FTC would look specifically into charges that domestic trading in

Dulles Asks Action On Germany Now

Presses for Security Plan Also; Against China Talk Till Later

Berlin, Jan. 27 (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles urged the Berlin conference today to skip over action on Russia's proposal for a meeting with Communist China and come to grips immediately with the problems of German unification and European security.

Dulles declared the Soviet demand for a five-power conference including the Peiping government "is primarily a devise to attempt to secure for that regime a position in the councils of the world which it has not earned or had accorded to it by the international community generally, including the United Nations."

"Certainly," he emphatically declared, "This four-power conference is not the place to decide that matter."

Calls for May, June Dates

Molotov submitted yesterday a formed resolution to call a five-power meeting in May or June. The United States had already rejected the whole concept. But it also had accepted, along with Britain and France, a Russian sponsored agenda which put the five-power proposal as the first item of business beginning in the third session today.

Half an hour after this afternoon's meeting got under way Assistant Secretary of State McCardle handed to reporters a text of the Dulles statement which re-

Polio Canvass Is To Be Started by City Fire Sirens

Some Outlying Districts to Participate; March Symbolizes Drive on Disease

Starting at 7 o'clock tonight, every ward in Kingston, as well as several outlying districts, will be canvassed as a part of Ulster county's second annual Mothers' March on Polio.

Fire sirens at Central Station on East O'Reilly street and at the Ulster Hose Engine House will sound to herald the big drive which last year raised about $4,200.

This year, an even larger sum is hoped for by Mrs. John Hogan, chairman of the Mothers' March, who said today that "more help is needed than ever before to help stamp out the dreaded disease of polio. Our Ulster county quota is $50,000 and tonight's second annual march should go a long way to help us reach this goal," Mrs. Hogan added.

Poem Is Slogan

While announcing the various ward captains this morning, Mrs. Hogan released a poem composed at the regional headquarters of the March of Dimes which is the slogan for this year's Mothers' March.

The poem follows:
The 27th is the night,
When all good mothers join the fight.
Whether sleet, rain, hail or snow,
Tonight, they march on polio.
With their help we soon will see,
The final day of Victory.

Big Boost to Fund

Although Mothers' Marches on Polio are comparatively new in Kingston and Ulster county, the marches have proved to be a tremendous boost to the National Foundation funds. The first such march was held in Phoenix, Ariz., in 1950 and in the following year caught on quickly as a national event.

Since 1951, Mothers' Marches have added $22,073,000 to the attack on polio, representing about 18 per cent of the funds which the National Foundation has received during the past three years.

ReutherHas Idea Move Anti-Labor

CIO Leader Attacks Eisenhower Plan as Prejudiced in Favor of Businesses

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—CIO President Walter Reuther said today President Eisenhower's recommendation for government-sponsored strike votes reflects "a deep-seated anti-labor prejudice."

Reuther bitingly criticized most of Eisenhower's 14-point program for revising the Taft-Hartley labor relations law, stating in testimony prepared for a Senate labor committee hearing that its net effect would be to make the law "even worse than it is."

The CIO leader was the first witness from union ranks to tell the committee what he thinks of Eisenhower's Taft-Hartley ideas.

"This is not a middle-of-the-road approach to labor-management relations," Reuther asserted. "It is essentially the approach of the National Assn. of Manufacturers, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and of the anti-union employers whom they represent."

Has Serious Doubts

Only yesterday, William B. Barton, the chamber's general counsel, told the committee his organization has serious doubts about half the administration program.

However, the chamber did offer qualified support for the strike-vote idea which Reuther attacked today.

Under this proposal, the government would hold a secret poll to find out if workers want to strike against their employes in labor disputes. Secretary of Labor Mitchell said yesterday the administration feels such a vote should precede an actual walkout.

Reuther said his recommendation is based on a "misconception that unions act contrary to the will of their members."

All CIO unions, he told the committee, now provide for "democratic determination of strike action."

Would Extend Interference

Reuther said the proposal is bound to "hamper rather than encourage" collective bargaining. He also said it would extend "government interference" in labor-management affairs.

This proposal has aroused more controversy than any of the other Eisenhower labor recommendations and there are indications that the Labor Committee will drop it. Sen. Ives of New York, second ranking Republican on the committee, and a solid corps of committee Democrats are on record against it.

Says Promise Not Kept

The CIO chief accused Eisenhower of failing to fulfill a campaign promise to recommend eliminations of a part of the T-H Law allowing collective bargaining elections during a strike.

In his labor message to Congress Jan. 11, Eisenhower said this could be used to "destroy" a striking union. He proposed that struck employers be barred from obtaining such a government election for a year. He also suggested that a rival union should not be permitted to challenege a struck union's status as bargaining agent for four months. A bill to carry out this recommendation has been introduced by Committee Chairman H. Alexander Smith (R.-N.J.).

Reuther voiced limited approval of Eisenhower's proposal for relaxation of restrictions on secondary boycotts, but he said it doesn't go far enough.

Compromise Talk

Sen. John W. Bricker (R.-Ohio), left, and Sen. William F. Knowland (R.-Cal.), Senate majority leader, talk, Jan. 26, before the start of a Congressional committee meeting. Earlier Bricker said a desire to keep the Republican party from being "torn apart" would lead him to accept a reasonable compromise on altering treaty-making powers in the constitution. Knowland has been active in trying to reach such a compromise. In the absence of one, he will lead the adminstration's floor fight against the amendment in its present form.

Wicks Bill Favors Annual Reports on Labor Welfare Cash

Kingston Senator Says Requirement Would Prevent Looting by Racketeers

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—Sen. Arthur H. Wicks proposed today that labor unions be required to report to the state each year the administrative details of their welfare funds.

The Kingston Republican introduced a bill he said was intended to "prevent the looting of such funds by labor racketeers and unscrupulous labor leaders."

It would require labor unions that maintain welfare funds to file with the state superintendent of insurance a report of the names, addresses and salaries of the officers and employes in the fund program.

Would List Insurance

The measure also would require the union to list insurance companies and the brokers and agents involved if the union bought insurance to cover its members.

The bill would apply to all union funds providing for medical and hospital care, pensions, death benefits, workmen's compensation, and unemployment and disability benefits to its members.

The Insurance Department is investigating the operation of union welfare funds. The probe stems from disclosures about the operations of a union welfare fund at Yonkers raceway, center of the harness racing scandal.

Child Crushed to Death

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—A 10-year-old Negro girl was crushed to death by a heavily-laden trailer truck on East 166th street, at Washington avenue, the Bronx, yesterday when her roller skates slipped from under her as she "hitched" a tow from the truck, police reported. She was identified as Jackie Wilbanks, of 504 East 166th street, the Bronx. The truck driver, John Conque, 41, of 619 East 140th street, the Bronx, was quoted by police as saying that while eastbound on 166th street he hard a thump, halted to investigate and found that a rear wheel had crushed the girl. Police took no action against the driver.

Americans, Others Leave Soon for Lonely Korean Zone

Indian General Approves Red Plan to Have Men Moved by Red Cross

Panmunjom, Jan. 27 (AP)—Twenty-one Americans, 1 Briton and 325 South Koreans leave for lonely, snow-swept Korean neutral zone tomorrow for their self-chosen Communist future.

Indian Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya today approved a face-saving Communist plan to let the Red Cross societies of North Korea and China take the men out of their compound to new homes in the north.

The Americans told newsmen Tuesday they wanted the Communist Command to accept them as "free men."

The Red Command has refused to take the 347 as war prisoners. Communist leaders charged that it was illegal for the Indians to give Korean war prisoners back to the sides that captured them.

However, by letting the Red Cross groups take over, the Reds are getting the 347 and at the same time continuing the official refusal to accept them as POWs.

The Indians handed over 22,000 anti-Red Chinese and Korean prisoners to the UN Command Jan. 20. The UNC freed them as civilians at midnight two days later in accordance with armistice terms.

45 Persons Are Named By Donovan

Late Willy Morretti Listed as One—Full Report Not Released by Bannigan

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—Several of the nation's most notorious criminals, including Frank Costello, visited Charles (Lucky) Luciano in prison, it was revealed today.

Eugene F. Bannigan, Assembly Democratic leader, disclosed to reporters some of the names on the list of 45 given him by Correction Commissioner Edward J. Donovan.

Besides gambler Costello, the list included Meyer Lansky, Joseph (Socks) Lanza and Willy Morretti.

Costello has long been regarded as one of the kingpins of the underworld.

Served Short Term

Lansky, identified by a witness before Kefauver Crime Committee as an Associate of Murder Inc., last year served a short term after pleading guilty to a gambling charge in connection with the operation of a Saratoga casino.

Morretti was shot to death in a restaurant in Palisades, N. J. It was believed to be a gangster assassination.

Bannigan said that of the 35 names on the list, 12 were grouped under a paragraph that said they had been approved for visits to Luciano after a request to the late Commissioner John A. Lyons in 1942 "so that the inmate might render assistance to the war effort."

Bannigan gave reporters off the record the names of the other eight in this grouping.

Bannigan said the reporters could use the names of any of the eight they might identify as hoodlums.

Bannigan had told reporters last night and again this morning that he intended to release the entire list.

Might Hurt Innocent

However, at a news conference early this afternoon he said he did not want to give out all the names because he feared it might cause injury to innocent persons.

Bannigan said "I have two questions for Gov. Dewey:"

"1. Who made the request for the visits (of the 12)?

"2. What did these people have to do with the war effort?"

Bannigan said he was asking Donovan for the dates of the visits of the 12.

He said the entire list included seven members of Luciano's family, seven attorneys and six law enforcement officials.

He said there were no "politicians" on the list.

He added that by politicians he included public servants.

Asked why he did not release the whole list, Bannigan said:

"Because people whose names I might mention and whose names might appear in the papers would be given undue public notice of their connection with this notorious man."

Bannigan was asked whether he had confidence that he had been given the complete list of Luciano's visitors during the racketeer's 10-year incarceration in two state prisons.

He replied "No—and you can quote that."

'Hypocrisy' Baffling

Bannigan told reporters in commenting on a letter from Commissioner Donovan this morning that "political hypocrisy, to me, is not understandable, when I receive a letter from a commissioner of a department in which he advises me not to release the names of visitors because of the fact that it is consistent with sound prison administration.

"I am completely amazed that yesterday the same commissioner released the name of a notorious hoodlum who had visited Luciano."

Bannigan referred to Costello, who had been mentioned indirectly by Donovan in a letter to Assemblyman Louis A. Cioffi, New York Democrat.

Bannigan added:

"The Republican Party of the state of New York is seeking by devious methods to avert the cataclysm of eminent defeat in not admitting its errors and omissions to the people, who are rightfully

Dewey and Ives Split Over Choice of Judge

President Ahead In Bricker Tiff

Appears to Hold Upper Hand in Change of Treaty Powers

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Eisenhower appeared today to have the upper hand in his battle with Sen. Bricker (R.-Ohio) over a proposed change in treaty-making powers.

With Eisenhower facing further questions about his stand at a White House news conference the controversy heads toward these possible outcomes:

1. Bricker could take the unlikely step of compromising or abandoning the heart of his proposed constitutional amendment—which says that "a treaty shall

Senator Asks Bicks Be Named; No Choice Given by Dewey

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Sen. Irving M. Ives were reported split today on the choice of the first Republican federal judge to be appointed here since the early New Deal days.

The disharmony between the two factions on this issue came at a time when Ives was being mentioned as a possible candidate for governor if Dewey does not seek re-election this year.

Ives has recommended to the White House the appointment of Alexander Bicks, a New York real estate attorney, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement Dec. 31 of U. S. District Court Judge Vincent L. Leibell.

Dewey and Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell, Jr., a close political associate of Dewey, are understood to oppose appointment of Bicks although they are not recorded as having specifically endorsed anybody else.

Proposes Choices

However, Thomas J. Curran, secretary of state and New York (Manhattan) county GOP leader, has proposed two possible choices. They are George J. Mintzer, an impartial chairman of the Woman's Garment Industry, and Charles L. Sylvester, a former assistant U. S. attorney.

Bicks helped raise funds for Ives' 1952 reelection campaign.

Mintzer ran for General Sessions judge in 1952 and was manager of Republican Edward Corsi's 1950 mayoral campaign. Sylves-

Voters to Be Asked to Okay Bonds for Mental Hospitals

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—The voters will be asked next fall to approve a state bond issue of 350 million dollars to build mental hospitals.

The loan, under administration bills given final legislative approval yesterday, would be paid off with revenues from the state war-bonus taxes on cigarettes and incomes.

Gov. Dewey is sure to sign the measures. He called for the bond issue and repayment plan in his message to the Legislature.

Final action by the lawmakers came in the Senate. There the Democrats again tried to put off the mental hospital measures until next year and substitute a 500-million-dollar bond issue for school construction.

The Republican majority shouldered that move aside with a straight party vote, 37-18. Then the Democrats joined the GOP in a unanimous vote in favor of the mental hygiene bonds.

Also unanimous was the Senate vote for a second bill allocating income from the war bonus taxes—a penny a pack on cigarettes

ReutherHas Idea Move Anti-Labor

CIO Leader Attacks Eisenhower Plan as Prejudiced in Favor of Businesses

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—CIO President Walter Reuther said today President Eisenhower's recommendation for government-sponsored strike votes reflects "a deep-seated anti-labor prejudice."

Wicks Bill Favors Annual Reports on Labor Welfare Cash

Kingston Senator Says Requirement Would Prevent Looting by Racketeers

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—Sen. Arthur H. Wicks proposed today that labor unions be required to report to the state each year the administrative details of their welfare funds.

The Kingston Republican introduced a bill he said was intended to "prevent the looting of such funds by labor racketeers and unscrupulous labor leaders."

It would require labor unions that maintain welfare funds to file with the state superintendent of insurance a report of the names, addresses and salaries of the officers and employes in the fund program.

Would List Insurance

The measure also would require the union to list insurance companies and the brokers and agents involved if the union bought insurance to cover its members.

The bill would apply to all union funds providing for medical and hospital care, pensions, death benefits, workmen's compensation, and unemployment and disability benefits to its members.

The Insurance Department is investigating the operation of union welfare funds. The probe stems from disclosures about the operations of a union welfare fund at Yonkers raceway, center of the harness racing scandal.

Child Crushed to Death

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—A 10-year-old Negro girl was crushed to death by a heavily-laden trailer truck on East 166th street, at Washington avenue, the Bronx, yesterday when her roller skates slipped from under her as she "hitched" a tow from the truck, police reported. She was identified as Jackie Wilbanks, of 504 East 166th street, the Bronx. The truck driver, John Conque, 41, of 619 East 140th street, the Bronx, was quoted by police as saying that while eastbound on 166th street he hard a thump, halted to investigate and found that a rear wheel had crushed the girl. Police took no action against the driver.

Americans, Others Leave Soon for Lonely Korean Zone

Indian General Approves Red Plan to Have Men Moved by Red Cross

Panmunjom, Jan. 27 (AP)—Twenty-one Americans, 1 Briton and 325 South Koreans leave for lonely, snow-swept Korean neutral zone tomorrow for their self-chosen Communist future.

Indian Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya today approved a face-saving Communist plan to let the Red Cross societies of North Korea and China take the men out of their compound to new homes in the north.

The Americans told newsmen Tuesday they wanted the Communist Command to accept them as "free men."

The Red Command has refused to take the 347 as war prisoners. Communist leaders charged that it was illegal for the Indians to give Korean war prisoners back to the sides that captured them.

However, by letting the Red Cross groups take over, the Reds are getting the 347 and at the same time continuing the official refusal to accept them as POWs.

The Indians handed over 22,000 anti-Red Chinese and Korean prisoners to the UN Command Jan. 20. The UNC freed them as civilians at midnight two days later in accordance with armistice terms.

Dewey and Ives Split Over Choice of Judge

Appears to Hold Upper Hand in Change of Treaty Powers

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Eisenhower appeared today to have the upper hand in his battle with Sen. Bricker (R.-Ohio) over a proposed change in treaty-making powers.

With Eisenhower facing further questions about his stand at a White House news conference the controversy heads toward these possible outcomes:

1. Bricker could take the unlikely step of compromising or abandoning the heart of his proposed constitutional amendment—which says that "a treaty shall

Senator Asks Bicks Be Named; No Choice Given by Dewey

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Sen. Irving M. Ives were reported split today on the choice of the first Republican federal judge to be appointed here since the early New Deal days.

The disharmony between the two factions on this issue came at a time when Ives was being mentioned as a possible candidate for governor if Dewey does not seek re-election this year.

Ives has recommended to the White House the appointment of Alexander Bicks, a New York real estate attorney, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement Dec. 31 of U. S. District Court Judge Vincent L. Leibell.

Dewey and Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell, Jr., a close political associate of Dewey, are understood to oppose appointment of Bicks although they are not recorded as having specifically endorsed anybody else.

Proposes Choices

However, Thomas J. Curran, secretary of state and New York (Manhattan) county GOP leader, has proposed two possible choices. They are George J. Mintzer, an impartial chairman of the Woman's Garment Industry, and Charles L. Sylvester, a former assistant U. S. attorney.

Bicks helped raise funds for Ives' 1952 reelection campaign.

Mintzer ran for General Sessions judge in 1952 and was manager of Republican Edward Corsi's 1950 mayoral campaign. Sylves-

Voters to Be Asked to Okay Bonds for Mental Hospitals

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—The voters will be asked next fall to approve a state bond issue of 350 million dollars to build mental hospitals.

The loan, under administration bills given final legislative approval yesterday, would be paid off with revenues from the state war-bonus taxes on cigarettes and incomes.

Gov. Dewey is sure to sign the measures. He called for the bond issue and repayment plan in his message to the Legislature.

Final action by the lawmakers came in the Senate. There the Democrats again tried to put off the mental hospital measures until next year and substitute a 500-million-dollar bond issue for school construction.

The Republican majority shouldered that move aside with a straight party vote, 37-18. Then the Democrats joined the GOP in a unanimous vote in favor of the mental hygiene bonds.

Also unanimous was the Senate vote for a second bill allocating income from the war bonus taxes —a penny a pack on cigarettes

45 Persons Are Named By Donovan

Late Willy Morretti Listed as One—Full Report Not Released by Bannigan

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—Several of the nation's most notorious criminals, including Frank Costello, visited Charles (Lucky) Luciano in prison, it was revealed today.

Eugene F. Bannigan, Assembly Democratic leader, disclosed to reporters some of the names on the list of 45 given him by Correction Commissioner Edward J. Donovan.

Besides gambler Costello, the list included Meyer Lansky, Joseph (Socks) Lanza and Willy Morretti.

Costello has long been regarded as one of the kingpins of the underworld.

Served Short Term

Lansky, identified by a witness before Kefauver Crime Committee as an Associate of Murder Inc., last year served a short term after pleading guilty to a gambling charge in connection with the operation of a Saratoga casino.

Morretti was shot to death in a restaurant in Palisades, N. J. It was believed to be a gangster assassination.

Bannigan said that of the 35 names on the list, 12 were grouped under a paragraph that said they had been approved for visits to Luciano after a request to the late Commissioner John A. Lyons in 1942 "so that the inmate might render assistance to the war effort."

Bannigan gave reporters off the record the names of the other eight in this grouping.

Bannigan said the reporters could use the names of any of the eight they might identify as hoodlums.

Bannigan had told reporters last night and again this morning that he intended to release the entire list.

Might Hurt Innocent

However, at a news conference early this afternoon he said he did not want to give out all the names because he feared it might cause injury to innocent persons.

Bannigan said "I have two questions for Gov. Dewey:"

"1. Who made the request for the visits (of the 12)?

"2. What did these people have to do with the war effort?"

Bannigan said he was asking Donovan for the dates of the visits of the 12.

He said the entire list included seven members of Luciano's family, seven attorneys and six law enforcement officials.

He said there were no "politicians" on the list.

He added that by politicians he included public servants.

Asked why he did not release the whole list, Bannigan said:

"Because people whose names I might mention and whose names might appear in the papers would be given undue public notice of their connection with this notorious man."

Bannigan was asked whether he had confidence that he had been given the complete list of Luciano's visitors during the racketeer's 10-year incarceration in two state prisons.

He replied "No—and you can quote that."

'Hypocrisy' Baffling

Bannigan told reporters in commenting on a letter from Commissioner Donovan this morning that "political hypocrisy, to me, is not understandable, when I receive a letter from a commissioner of a department in which he advises me not to release the names of visitors because of the fact that it is consistent with sound prison administration.

"I am completely amazed that yesterday the same commissioner released the name of a notorious hoodlum who had visited Luciano."

Bannigan referred to Costello, who had been mentioned indirectly by Donovan in a letter to Assemblyman Louis A. Cioffi, New York Democrat.

Bannigan added:

"The Republican Party of the state of New York is seeking by devious methods to avert the cataclysm of eminent defeat in not admitting its errors and omissions to the people, who are rightfully

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

My New Friend Otto

Back in 1943, I produced a show by Oscar Hammerstein II called "Carmen Jones." It was a success and, if I may say so, a distinguished one. And for several reasons: First, its basic plot and music were taken from Bizet's memorable opera, "Carmen." Second, the new libretto and lyrics were in easy-to-understand English and the story was given an American setting. Third, it was performed by a talented all-Negro cast.

During the past 10 years, as might be expected, almost every major studio in Hollywood has tried to buy the film rights to "Carmen Jones." And each time the conversation has gone about like this:

Bigshot—My studio would like to make a movie of "Jones." We are prepared to pay you a lot of money, and also scratch your back.

Me—Have you got the cash on you?

Bigshot—We can sign the contracts in the morning. Of course, there'll have to be a clause giving us the right to make the picture with an all-white cast.

Me—Not interested. Every word of the piece was written for a Negro cast.

Bigshot — Movies, unlike the theatre, are for a world audience. We've got to be careful not to offend anybody.

Me—What's offensive about a Negro cast?

Bigshot—Well—uh, you see, our problem is a complicated one. For instance, the theatres in the South won't play a movie if it has a lot of colored actors. Now, I'm as liberal as the next fellow, but when you invest a million dollars in a project you've got to have the practical approach.

Me — Malarkey. My ledgers prove that using Negroes where the script calls for Negroes is a mighty practical approach. "Carmen Jones," sire, during its four-year run played almost every city in the Deep South and, as a rule, to packed houses.

Bigshot (patronizingly) — You've got a lot to learn about the picture business. We didn't make our millions by being stupid. Now, how about the contract?

Me—Go soak your head in celery tonic. And, by the way, I've got a message for you from Mr. Hammerstein. He also says, go soak your head in celery tonic. . . .

And that's how it went until a month ago when Otto Preminger, producer of the controversial "The Moon Is Blue," dropped in to see me.

Preminger—I've got an independent outfit, and we'd like to make a movie of "Carmen Jones." Would you and Oscar like to sell the film rights?

Me—I suppose you want to use a white cast.

Preminger—Definitely not. It was written for a colored one, and there are plenty of fine Negro performers available.

Me—How about the Deep South?

Preminger—The South doesn't worry me a bit. Considering its population, it has as many cultured people as the North. If "Carmen Jones" is a good movie, they'll go to see it.

Me—Aren't you afraid of your investment?

Preminger—All pictures are a gamble, but the worst gamble is a picture based on a stale theme. Besides, I'm not worried about getting our money back on "Carmen Jones." We can get out of the red by showing it simultaneously in the 15 big opera houses of Europe. Judging by the way London, Paris, Vienna and Berlin received "Porgy and Bess," we figure to make a lot of money. How about a contract?

Me—If it's all right with Oscar I'll sign as soon as my hand stops shaking. Let's have a drink on it—I just got in a case of imported celery tonic. . . .

What does the above prove? It proves, as I see it, that Hollywood is about ready to stop acting like a bunch of children playing mumbly-peg in Fort Knox. It proves, too, that the time is not far off when certain esteemed gentlemen who have been making pictures will go back to making shoes. And that the future of flickers—if they have a future—will be shaped by independent producers like Preminger who have the courage to say "boo" to the old taboos.

Teachers Must Get Increase to Keep Best, Megel Says

Carl J. Megel, president of the AFL American Federation of Teachers, said in Chicago today that the $500 cost of living bonus for this year, and the $1,000 across the board pay increase for next year, requested by the Kingston Teachers Federation, AFT affiliate, is in line with national needs for "keeping the qualified teachers we now have, and attracting our best young people into teachers colleges."

Megel recently estimated that it will take an average $500 per year per teacher increase nationally, to stop an exodus of about 100,000 qualified teachers this year to jobs in business and industry for cost of living pay, and another $500 increase similarly to attract enough of "our best young people" into the colleges.

"Present average teachers' pay," he said, "ranges from a low of $1,627 in Mississippi to a high of $4,625 in New York state. The national average of $3,310 before income tax, is 25 per cent under the average pay of occupational workers, and 60 per cent less than the earnings of other professions requiring comparable education and training.

"Under present school tax formula, without federal aid the financing of higher teachers' salaries must come from higher local property taxes and increased state aid. Many states are not giving as much aid as they should. But the old school board answer, 'we haven't got the money' has become a worn out song. So has the reply, 'Show us where to get it, and we'll give you a raise.' It is the teachers' job to prepare young people for tasks of their generation, and for living in it, and it is the job of the public and the school board to remunerate them fairly and adequately for their services.

"Nearly every community in America faces the same situation. It is an accumulated one, from over the years. It will be corrected when teachers are given the professional status of professonal income, thus enabling teaching to become a stabilized and honored life-time work rather than a stop-gap to marriage or a mere step toward some other more remuneratice endeavor."

Wants Tax Stabilized

Reading, Pa. (AP) — John Flamish went before the county assessment board here to appeal a tax increase on a structure he owns in Sinking Spring. He told the board that the assessment had been $500 and this year jumped to $2,500. "It's called a four-car garage but it's really an old livery stable and there's not a horse in Sinking Spring," he told the board.

Saved Industry

The Australian ladybird beetle once saved the citrus industry of the entire California coast. The beetle was introduced in San Francisco to counteract an insect war on the orange and lemon groves and devoured the insects at a tremendous rate.

Today in Holy Land

(Generations have grown up calling it the Holy Land—the territory centering around Jerusalem, a city where Christians, Jews and Moslems have shrines. But for several years the Holy Land has been torn by strife. Often the smile of tolerance has turned into a glare of defiance. There is an armistice, but it frequently echoes to gunfire.

(Exactly what is the situation today, on both sides of the armistice line? What hopes of peace exists? AP Correspondent Lynn Heinzerling was assigned to report the facts as he saw them. He traveled 2,600 miles through Arab and Israeli areas, and talked with scores of persons. This is the first of his articles).

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Jerusalem, Jan. 27 (AP)—There can't be any doubt about who lost the 1948 war between Israel and her Arab neighbors. The losers are still sitting around the battlefield, ragged, sullen and resentful.

These are the Palestine refugees—868,350 of them officially—who have endured their exile from normal life for nearly six years. Their Arab leaders say they must return to their former homes, now in Israel. Israel says they will never return.

Grouped in an irregular, reproachful semi-circle around the land frontiers of Israel in Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and the Egyptian-controlled Gaza strip, the refugees sit and brood over their misfortune. Each year, 25,000 new refugees are born.

In Tents or Caves

They live in tents, in shacks, in mud or straw huts, in caves. Some have found crowded refuge with friends or relatives. They have taken over mosques, old military barracks and stables. Many others, who fled from their homes in Palestine with money, are now asking for aid.

Their best friend is UNRWA, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees. It spends some 25 million dollars each year for their food, education and medical attention.

Only 271,583 of the refugees live in the 61 official UNRWA camps, stretching from Aleppo, Syria, in the north to the desert wastes of Gaza in the south. The rest live the best they can. At the start of each month, all line up and receive from UNRWA 22 pounds of flour and some rice, dried peas or beans, oil or fat and sugar, with a piece of soap. This usually lasts about 25 days. The refugees must scrounge or barter for their food the rest of the month.

Some of them are militantly expressive. Many, after five years, are apathetic and resigned to a life of uselessness. But all are eager for their children to know something better than the drab life into which they have fallen.

95,000 Children Taught

About 95,000 children are being taught by 2,000 refugee teachers in UNRWA elementary schools. Another 55,000 have been admitted to private or public schools in their countries of refuge.

Dr. Robert Westwater, former chief inspector of public schools in Ottawa, heads UNRWA's education division. He says a vocational training program also is being expanded, but it is difficult to find jobs for graduates. Dr. Westwater says he has encountered "a widespread feeling that a man who works with his hands is low caste" and UNRWA is seeking to "establish the dignity of labor."

One effort to help refugees find jobs shattered on the opposition of refugee spokesmen and a part of the Arab press. The UNRWA placement officer, Mrs. Olga Hyka of New York, had classified the occupations of 36,000 refugees. She was accused of listing refugee skills for the U. S. Army for possible use in a war with the Soviet Union. She was also accused of being a "Zionist agent." She had managed to place 3,575 refugees in private employment when the classification was discontinued because of the criticism.

Among Most Literate

The Palestine Arabs always were among the most literate of middle eastern peoples, Dr. Westwater said. Now they are the captives of circumstance. They have become one of the basic political realities of the middle east. No political leader can ignore them.

Although more than 121 million dollars has been spent on relief, spokesmen for the refugees condemn UNRWA and most Arab governments offer only grudging cooperation.

Dr. Izzat Tannous, general secretary of Palestine refugee committees in Lebanon, calls the UNRWA ration one on which "an animal could hardly live."

Refugee spokesmen insist that all refugees must return to their homes, now in Israel, even though more than 600,000 Jewish immigrants have moved into Israel in the meantime and others are still coming. Many of these immigrants are refugees from Europe. They have taken over Arab villages not destroyed and built hundreds of settlements.

Issues Pamphlet

Tannous issued a pamphlet saying:

"What kind of a democracy are we living under, when a refugee only a few yards from his home cannot go back to it and live a peaceful and free life?

"The refugees insist on their return to their homeland and the Arab countries, for social, economic and political reasons look forward to the day when all refugees will return to their homes."

The Israeli government, in a White Paper on the Arab refugees, contends that for Arab political leaders "the refugee question is a purely political issue." It adds:

"For Israel to take in a large hostile population united by ties of blood with the surrounding countries which are bent on its extermination, would be little short of suicidal. But the case against repatriation of the Arab refugees rest not merely on considerations of security. The pattern of Arab life as it was before 1948 (in Israel) no longer exists and cannot be restored."

Would Not Go to Israel

Actually, many of the refugees would not want to live in Israel. One responsible source estimated that not more than 25 per cent, mainly landowners, would want to return.

UNRWA has a 200 million dollar fund for development projects in Arab countries capable of absorbing refugees. The only major agreements so far are with Jordan for an irrigation and power scheme using the waters of the Yarmuk river and with Egypt for a project to irrigate 50,000 acres of the Sinai Desert with Nile river water. If completed, the projects would make perhaps 275,000 refugees self-supporting.

The Yarmuk project is being held in abeyance pending consideration of a new unified scheme for developing the resources of the Jordan river. This project, prepared by the Tennessee Valley Authority at the request of UNRWA, would include Israel. This has raised suspicions and doubts in the minds of the Arabs.

Syria's Possibilities

Many international officials say Syria, with only 85,000 refugees, has the greatest possibilities for resettlement of all the Arab countries directly involved. Between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in northern Syria, millions of acres of land in the El Jazirah plain are only partly cultivated. The late Husni Az-Zaim, who held power briefly in Damascus in 1949, said privately he could settle all the Arab refugees there with 500 million dollars.

United Nations officials say the Syrian government has cooperated more than any other Arab government in the spirit and aims of UNRWA. But President Adib Shishekly, who owes his office to a coup d'etat, must give no opportunity to the opposition to complain that he has recognized the state of Israel and accepted the principle of settling refugees outside Israel.

He has agreed to turn over public land for refugess as long as there are refugees in Syria.

There is little hope of resettling any of the refugees in Lebanon, where there already is an unemployment problem. Another consideration is that Lebanon has a Christian majority of about 52 per cent, according to the last census. Acceptance of 103,000 refugess, mostly Moslems, would upset this balance.

Jordan made 474,000 refugees citizens on the order of King Abdullah, who later was assassinated for negotiating with Israel. The refugees, together with the wartime incorporation of parts of Palestine with a population of 300,000, nearly doubled Jordan's population.

Amman, the capital, not many years ago a dusty, desert village with mud roads and a population of 30,000, now has about 200,000. A building boom is on and many refugees have found employment.

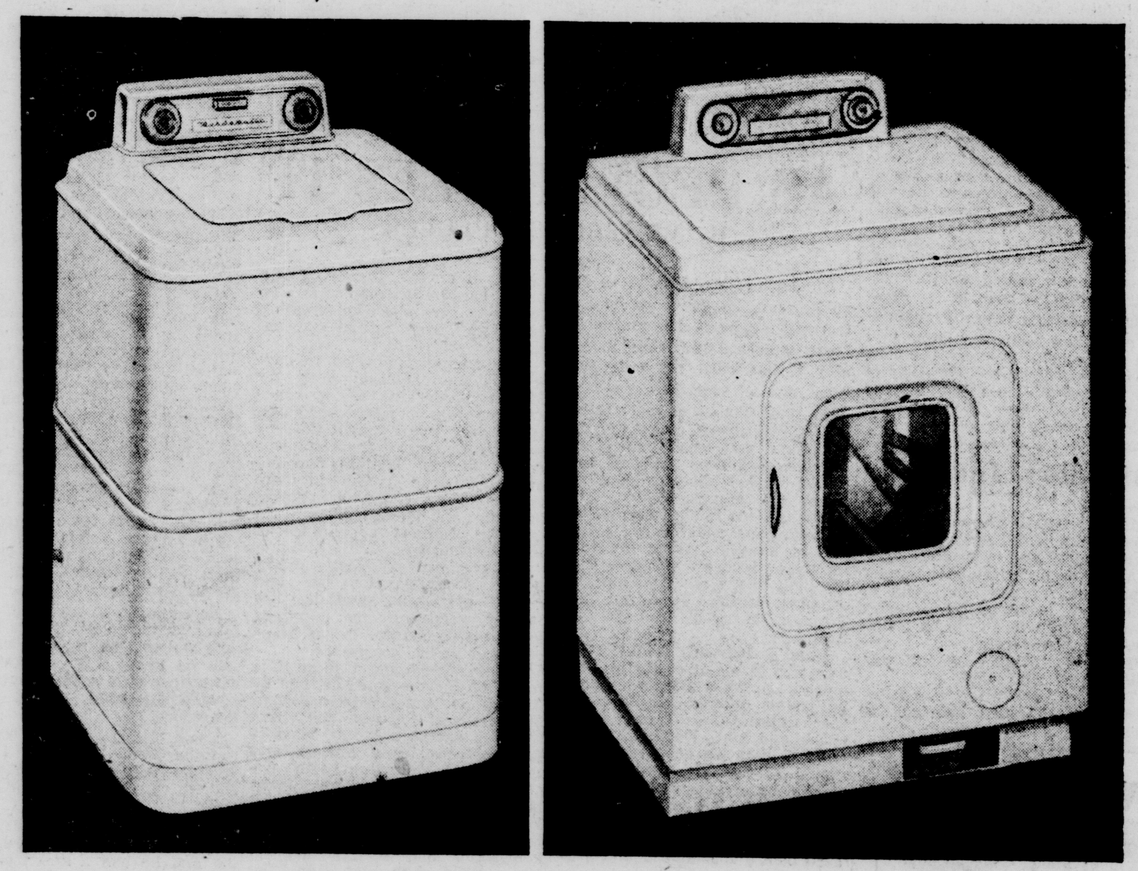

In fact, most of the men in the Jabal Husein Refugee Camp in the hills above Amman are employed. Because they agreed to work for as little as 50 cents a day, they displaced most of the previous working force. Many of the displaced laborers, in turn, were taken into Jordan's crack little army, the Arab Legion.

Five of the 10 men in the Jordan cabinet are Palestinians. Western diplomats believe Jordan would settle with Israel for a token repatriation of perhaps 100,000 refugees and a part of Galilee. But Jordan's voice is too weak to be heard in the Arab world.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, JANUARY 27, 1954

SOCIAL SECURITY PLAN

The social security system has been part of the federal and state government fabric since 1938. No politician who values his political life would propose that any substantial portion of it be repealed.

On the contrary, most politicians agree that social security is here to stay, whatever some of them may say publicly about "welfare-statism." In fact, the Republicans, who did not author the system, promised in their 1952 national platform to extend security coverage and make other improvements.

In keeping with those pledges, President Eisenhower recently submitted a broad plan for the further development of social security.

First of all, the President proposed to widen coverage from the present 69 million Americans to 80 million, bringing under protection self-employed farmers, professional people, and others.

Second, he would liberalize provisions governing outside earnings for the aged. Right now, any time a person under 75 years of age earns $75 a month on the outside, he loses that month's social security benefit. Mr. Eisenhower would allow an individual to make $1,000 a year in this manner without jeopardizing his government benefit.

Third, he would raise monthly payments. For those now retired, the existing individual minimum per month is $25, the maximum $85. The range for a man and wife is $37.50 and $127.50. Under the new plan, the individual lows and highs would be $30 and $98.50, the man and wife figures $45 and $147.75.

For people retiring in the future, the individual maximum would climb to $108.50, for a man and wife $162.75, as result of increased contributions.

At this time, both employer and employe contribute 2 per cent each on earnings up to $3,600 a year. That rate is slated to go up to 3 per cent by 1965. Mr. Eisenhower would hike it even higher, to 3.75 per cent, by 1970. And he would have this bite taken out of $4,200 a year instead of $3,600.

All these proposals can be argued for on reasonable grounds.

If the system is here to stay, as seems evident, then it ought fairly to cover as much of the working population as possible. No segment should suffer discrimination.

But certainly persons able and willing to continue working past retirement age ought to be encouraged to do so without penalty of loss of benefit. It appears reasonable, too, that contributions should gradually rise so that the ultimate return to the retired worker may be greater.

These principles put wise stress on self-help within a system of group protection.

At the same time, the plan to hike benefits makes sense, since the postwar inflation has sharply reduced the purchasing power of the dollar. What may have seemed an adequate minimum some years back can look pretty skimpy in today's markets.

By this program Mr. Eisenhower has offered hard, specific evidence that his concern for the average American is not a thing of mere high-sounding generalities. His proposals deserve the attention of his party and the whole Congress.

GET A HORSE

Machines have replaced horses in almost every line of work. In Philadelphia, however, horses and wagons are still used to distribute mail in the downtown areas. This has drawn criticism from people who believe that trucks could do the job faster and more economically.

Recently the Post Office authorities in Philadelphia conducted a series of tests to see if the criticism was valid. They found that in congested downtown traffic horses not only did the job cheaper but faster as well.

Because of the survey horses will continue to pull mail wagons through the streets of Philadelphia. Horses have been a victim of technological unemployment since the automobile came of age. In this case at least, however, the last laugh is a horse laugh.

According to a friend of ours who is an expert on such matters, used cars may soon cost what used cars used to cost.

THE EISENHOWER FARM PROGRAM

An effort is being made to give the impression that it is the object of the Eisenhower Administration to soak the American farmer. Nothing can be further from the truth. Such a policy would be disastrous, would produce an economic recession of important dimensions, and would be politically inept.

What, it seems to me, the Eisenhower Administration is trying to do is to integrate the farm policy into a general economic program designed to restore the American dollar to its proper value in purchasing power without damaging any element in the population.

To a Senator or Representative, up for election, the pressure of the moment is always the prevailing attitude of his constituency. And that prevailing opinion is often determined by the most aggressive of the various organizations interested in a particular field. Sometimes a Senator or a Representative can be forced, by local conditions, to straddle an isue to avoid, if possible, a struggle with his various local interests, which may be numerous and conflicting even in a single Congressional district; other times, he has to straddle between his own conscience and the various pressure groups. No matter what the great minds may say about vast national interests, a Representative is constitutionally a local official, speaking for his constituency; a Senator represents his state.

The President is not faced, or need he be, by such pressures. It a President is of sufficient moral stature, he can go to the whole people, speaking to them by radio and television, and telling the whole story from the standpoint of the national interest. He can set forth a national, not a local program. He can elevate the morale of the nation.

This country is at the moment fortunate in its Secretary of Agriculture, Ezra Taft Benson, an unusually devout person, incapable by training and tradition to compromise a moral issue. His reorganization of the Department of Agriculture represents a moral rather than a political attitude. Such a department should function for the nation and not in the interests of a wasteful and narrow, intrenched bureaucracy.

On the question of price supports, the inevitable disagreement must exist among city consumers of farm products, large scale producers and marginal producers who are not likely to see the same problem in the same way. Ours is a country of diverse and special interests in conflict for an increasing share of the earned dollar. A government department such as the Department of Agriculture, while recognizing the just rights of each separate group, can only be of service to the country when it adds to its specialized function a relationship to the total national economy. It cannot isolate itself. The President, if he does not debase his office, should add to this national purpose the long view of continuing national interest.

In the struggle between rigid and flexible price supports, only those farmers can benefit by rigid supports who do not care what happens to their own dollars, in purchasing power, so long as they receive government checks. The danger can be that in time the government checks could be worthless, as has happened in other countries. When the value of the American dollar depreciated to 53 cents, a warning was given to all sectors of the population that a perilous inflationary movement was developing. So far, the Eisenhower Administration has arrested the inflationary movement; it has not succeeded in restoring the value of the dollar, nor will it ever succeed until it can reduce government expenditures, one of which is the various subsidies which it pays out to maintain prices not only for farmers but for manufactured goods, shipping, etc.

The entire structure of such supports needs to be rationalized, supporting what cannot otherwise endure, lessening support, limiting or withdrawing support wherever possible. The flexible farm support program is not anti-farmer; it is beneficial to all Americans, including farmers who cannot prosper when products, like butter, are outpriced competitively. It gives the government a range of operations in an inflationary period which actually benefits nobody. The problem needs to be viewed in broad terms if there is not to be a revolt by city folks against the high prices they pay for their food in addition to high taxes. And the city folks have the votes if they get excited.

SLEEP TREATMENT OF MENTAL CASES

After living through World Wars 1 and 2, we are not surprised that so many men and women are suffering mentally and emotionally and that our mental clinics and mental institutions are fully occupied. In fact, if the shock method of treatment had not been discovered, many more mental hospitals would be needed.

It is of interest to learn that another method, rather than shock, of rendering a mental patient unconscious, is now giving excellent results in the hands of skilled psychiatrists.

In the Medical Press, Paris, Drs. A. Deschamps and M. Cadoret report their results by inducing prolonged sleep in mental patients. Prolonged sleep as induced by these two physicians differs from artificial hibernation (sleep caused by freezing) because it is induced by drugs, with refrigeration used merely to aid the effect of drugs. The depth of the sleep and the duration of the treatment are less important than the degree of relaxation secured.

Treatment by this method proved safe even in aged patients with heart disease and high blood pressure.

"Strict medical supervision is required and the drugs used to block the nerve centers should be withdrawn gradually at the close of the treatment. The sleep produced is calm and the patients are relaxed and indifferent. Breathing is regular and the pulse usually normal, and there nearly always is a drop in the blood pressure."

This method of inducing prolonged sleep was used in treating 15 patients with various psychiatric conditions who had not been helped by other methods of treatment or whose general condition was too poor for shock treatment.

The best results from this prolonged sleep treatment were secured in patients who had symptoms of agitation and confusion and severe melancholy anxiety but substantial improvement was also noted in patients with mania.

Many of us may get discouraged as we realize that there are more patients in mental institutions than in all other hospitals combined but we should keep in mind that our psychiatrists were able to discharge to home and occupations the majority of patients before these new discoveries, the shock method of treatment and the refrigeration and nerve-block methods, were in use.

And now that many of our general hospitals are equipped with psychiatric wards, sometimes combining hospital with home treatment under hospital supervision, there is not the stigma of mental illness disturbing patient and family.

Edson's Washington News Notebook

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

Washington — (NEA) — When congressional hearings on President Eisenhower's proposed amendments to the Taft-Hartley labor law begin on Jan. 25, new Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell will be put on something of a spot. His embarrassment will arise over the most controversial of the President's proposals. This is for a government-supervised secret vote of employes on acceptance of the employer's offer, and whether or not there should be a strike.

As a loyal member of the cabinet, Secretary Mitchell will be bound to support the President's program. He has already announced publicly that since this is the President's program, he—Mitchell—is for it.

If, however, the secretary is asked for his personal opinion as an experienced labor relations man, whether this prestrike vote proposal will work, his answer may be something else.

That answer is fairly simple to deduce. What such a strike vote will boil down to in every case will be a question of whether the employes will accept—say five cents an hour increase, or whether they'll ask for 10 cents an hour.

When there was a provision of this kind in the wartime Smith-Connolly labor act, the vote was in favor of the higher demand and a strike in 97 per cent of the cases. This was at a time when there was an incentive of patriotism to stay on the job. Without that incentive, there is little reason to believe that the results would be much better.

Unsound, Say Labor Experts

Experienced labor relations men cite reasons on the unsoundness of this proposal. They believe it would be wrong to get the government in on a labor dispute this early. It would run counter to the idea of returning collective bargaining to management and labor, without government interference until the negotiations have broken down.

Also, when grievances are put in writing—as they would have to be for a secret ballot—the grievances have to be answered on the specific points brought up. That means less freedom to bargain and find a settlement on compromise terms.

The grand snafu over how this proposal got into the President's message to Congress, and why it was allowed to stay there can now be pretty well straightened out. Contrary to general belief, it can be stated authoritatively that both Secretary Mitchell and Republican Sen. Irving Ives of New York, the GOP's leading liberal on labor matters, were consulted on the matter. But they were not fully informed on the final language of the message.

The idea for the strike vote came from Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, as has been stated previously. Secretary Mitchell did not think the matter was terribly important. Secretary Weeks did. So Secretary Mitchell let the proposal go through. In so doing he misjudged the reaction of opposition from union labor leaders.

To say that the strike vote idea originated with Secretary Weeks is inaccurate. There was a similar provision in the first drafts of the original Taft-Hartley Act. There have been lots of hearings on this proposal. It was knocked out by Congress in 1947 because it had failed to function as expected in the Smith-Connolly Act. Secretary Weeks and his advisers simply made another attempt to get it back in.

May Endanger Other Proposals

There had been some hope that the strike vote proposal could be separated from the other parts of the President's message. Instead it was made point 12 of the 14-point proposal. This inclusion may endanger some of the other 13 points if Congress tries to handle the whole thing as a package deal.

The original drafts of the message had made clear that the proposed vote of the employes be taken before any strike could begin. The White House changed this in the final draft and specified no time for the vote. This led to a further gum-up on the proposal.

The President's idea in not specifying when the vote should be taken was a deliberate attempt to state a problem in geneal terms and leave it up to Congress to work out the details. Sen. H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, therefore swung into action fast with a bill to have the vote conducted after the strike had begun. This bill was obviously prepared in advance of the message and with foreknowledge of its content.

Senator Smith's idea was that the vote should be conducted after the employes had been out some time, and the economic pinch had begun to hurt. The argument against this is that if the vote were taken after the employes are out on strike, the employer would be reticent to make a final offer.

Congressional debate over this and other details will be long and bitter. The prospect is that it may be talked to death.

Tardy News Receipt in Foreign Nations Held Regrettable From U. S. Standpoint

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 27—Unfortunately newspaper headlines printed in the United States each day do not reach the people of Europe—at least not right away. So it is regrettable that the people of Great Britain, France and other European countries haven't seen yet the headlines of the last day or two in which it is emphasized in all the dispatches that Senator McCarthy "backed down" or "surrendered" or "retreated" in his controversy with three Democratic senators.

So much has been written abroad about Senator McCarthy as a "dictator," and repeated by returning American visitors, that the latest evidence should be instructive to Europeans. If the Wisconsin senator wasn't powerful enough even to dictate to a minority of his committee, he can't be much of a dictator. Yet abroad they speak of him as about to seize the reins of government any day.

What they fail to perceive in Europe is that in the United States public opinion is sovereign and that, when the three Democratic senators staged a walkout last summer because of their insistence that committee staff members be hired and fired by a majority of the committee rather than by the chairman, it was a significant protest. In due time heed was paid to this principle which, by the way, affects all congressional committees. For it should not be assumed that the present episode is the first in which the one-man power of the chairman has been asserted. It has happened just as often when the Democrats were in command of congressional committees, and what has just been adopted—to make a majority vote necessary—is, of course, a desirable reform.

But public opinion works in another way, too. Just as Senator McCarthy said that he didn't like to see one party manning the subcommittee and that the two-party system required representation of the minority as well as majority, it became important for the Democrats not to place themselves in the position of being unwilling to help investigate Communists in government and problems affecting governmental operations which the subcommittee of the committee on governmental operations is authorized to investigate.

So the controversy now has been resolved satisfactorily. It is a fact that Senator McCarthy reversed his position of last summer in the interest of committee harmony. Nobody was put in a concentration camp and nobody was seized and deprived of his right to free speech—and yet there are Americans and Europeans who have slandered the Wisconsin senator by calling him a "Hitler."

Senator McCarthy, moreover, has been attacked as having a presidential ambition. This is supposed to be an improper motive. The point has been made by McCarthy's enemies that he is engaged in the anti-Communist crusade merely to get publicity so he can run for President. What such observers fail to note is that neither political party in recent years—especially after the 1928 experience with the Al Smith candidacy—has shown signs of nominating any Catholic to the Presidency. "Liberals" have not said much about this form of discrimination, though the hero of the "Liberals" — Franklin D. Roosevelt— was charged in James A. Farley's book with having told a newspaper writer in 1940 that Farley couldn't be named for the vice presidency because of his religion.

For all practical purposes, there isn't the remotest chance that Senator McCarthy will ever be a candidate for the Presidency. This correspondent asked him for a statement on it recently, and he dictated the following:

"I have no interest and no ambition at all in that direction, to be nominated for President of the United States. I think I can do a better job where I am. No one has ever been nominated unless he has gone out for it, and I do not intend to go out for the nomination. There is no such thing as a draft. Unless you go out and work for a nomination, there is no draft.

"I think that pretty well covers it—about as positive as anyone can make it, I think. You'll find that it is not my friends who are talking about McCarthy being a candidate for President. With a very few exceptions, you'll find that those talking about McCarthy being a candidate for President have always been against me, and 90 per cent of them were not for Eisenhower in the last election and will not be for me in the next election, and they are trying to make it appear that I have some interest other than the public interest."

The Wisconsin senator never mentioned the religious barrier. But on Capitol Hill, among members of Congress who disagree with the senator, it is frequently mentioned in rebuttal to those who say Senator McCarthy is only interested in running for higher office.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, Jan. 26—This nation is a fortress against communism in Latin America and, thus, inevitably it has been the butt of a great deal of scurrility of a standard type. The head man, Rafael L. Trujillo, always called the generalissimo and benefactor of the republic, has been depicted as a bloody-handed dictator and the marvelous reforms which he has wrought since 1930 are minimized as mere "material" gains. Nevertheless, Trujillo has accomplished miracles which are the greater in the light of the fact that our government, under Roosevelt and Truman, harassed him all the time.

I had a visit with Trujillo a few days ago in his office in the magnificent capitol which he built and he plainly showed his hatred of the Americans in the White House and State Department who tried to help his enemies. I mentioned Eleanor Roosevelt and he shared my opinion, but the two individuals who are hated most are Spruille Braden and Ellis O. Briggs, who were ambassadors here before Eisenhower was elected.

The republic occupies about two-thirds of the island of Hispaniola. The other third, which is Haiti, lies to the west and is markedly "backward" by comparison. They were about alike until Trujillo came along and, like Mussolini, began hustling all over always in a thundering rush and accompanied by plenty of muscle, again like Mussolini, but also like Roosevelt and Truman, too, if you remember. He stood a fair chance of being potted had he not taken precautions.

Trujillo has built schools, waterworks, sewers and hospitals, a big university, and thousands of small homes for the workers, many of which I have seen, and brought internal peace and order. You take a chance of being knifed or garrotted on the streets and in the parks and subways of New York and the streets are a filthy disgrace, but there is almost no crime here and you could eat your lunch off any street in town.

The police, too, are clean and laundered. There is a spirit and appearance of happiness and friendliness unlike any that I have ever seen anywhere else and to a North American, the absolute indifference to color is a charming surprise. After a few days, I reflected that I was surprised at myself for being surprised because it would be so easy for us to cure our own situation, given the same mutual cooperation and good will.

The Communists tried to have it that the explosion along the Haitian border in 1937 in which an uncertain number of jungle types were killed and hacked up was a race war of the dominican nation against Haitian descendants of African slaves. But there are as many Negro dominicans as whites and they get along without the slightest appearance of self-consciousness.

I have had a Negro driver named Domingo for the last couple of weeks, and he has seemed puzzled by my questions about discrimination. It has never occurred in his experience.

A few nights ago I went to a reception for the generalissimo by the new ambassador from Argentina, General Martini, and there were, I should say, at least a dozen Negro army officers and their wives mingling with the other brass and the prelacy, who included the archbishop of Santo Domingo, primate of the Antilles, Richard Pittini. He is an aged gentleman and scholar and is stone blind now just from the wear and tear of life and reading. Our own new ambassador, William Pheiffer, had occasion to call on him soon after he checked in and after a little habla he was calling Pheiffer Bill and invited Pheiffer to call him Dick. When I was fixing to go at the end of my visit he cautioned me to be careful on the winding coral stairs in the ancient cathedral. I said never mind me, I could see, but couldn't I guide him back to his personal quarters? He said no, he had eyes in his fingers.

The gala by the Argentine ambassador was something out of the old courts of Paris and Vienna. The party was given at a night club called Voz Dominicana where they deal craps and roulette in a casino off the main room. The main table was as long as a bowling alley and was covered by a lace cloth which an authority tells me was something very elite. Trujillo and his brother, who is now president of the republic, Trujillo's son, who is a general, and numerous other members of the family were up and down the board and I hadn't seen so much gold braid and stuff since the lying in state of George V. But, why shouldn't they put on some dog? They have a flair for it and the Court of St. James is no more authentic than this one.

Flor Trujillo was there too, a very vivacious young woman who was one of the wives of Porfirio Rubirosa, the spectacular international stew who did a short hitch as husband to Doris Duke and is now tied up with Barbara Hutton. Flor gets around very informally and I met her again at dinner at the home of some American kids and still another time at the Brazilian ambassador's home. This statesman's name is Paulo G. Hasslocher and he is a walking compendium of statistics. He fizzes like a seidlitz powder but he knows how many automobiles there are in Honduras, the annual wage of the laboring class in Brazil and Pennsylvania, and the mean average rainfall of Minnesota where he used to spend vacations fishing around Virginia in the iron country.

He came up to my table where I was sitting in my trunks by the pool and told me who he was and said he knew a lot of American newspaper men in Washington. He started to name them—"Drew Pearson—."

I said "He is a louse!" The ambassador said, "Yes, and I know Walter Trohan, Lyle Wilson and Bill Hutch. I know Arthur Krock, too."

So he said come on out to his house for a drink tomorrow so I did and he had a dozen cases of Mumms stacked in the hall and insisted on giving me a bottle and another of very refined scotch as well. Mrs. Hasslocher is a very pretty blonde from Newark. She sings. The French ambassador was there and last night I saw him in the casino of the Jaragua Hotel, going against the wheel. Our embassy is very de luxe. It has not only an office building but a beautiful mansion with a swimming pool and a lot of land. We did have more but sold some to Trujillo for the generalissimo's palace.

There is a small marine guard attached to the embassy but they go jn mufti because the uniform might poke up memories of the occupation which all hands want to forget. Trujillo has made this a swanky world capital in the diplomatic sense with all these embassies and it does something good to the national and popular morale, you can be sure, because most of the people can remember when this town was a dirty old Spanish-Indian-Negro settlement on a ragged coral shore and they caught water in cisterns from their roofs and drank mosquitoes and larvae with it.

SOCIAL SECURITY PLAN

The social security system has been part of the federal and state government fabric since 1938. No politician who values his political life would propose that any substantial portion of it be repealed.

On the contrary, most politicians agree that social security is here to stay, whatever some of them may say publicly about "welfare-statism." In fact, the Republicans, who did not author the system, promised in their 1952 national platform to extend security coverage and make other improvements.

In keeping with those pledges, President Eisenhower recently submitted a broad plan for the further development of social security.

First of all, the President proposed to widen coverage from the present 69 million Americans to 80 million, bringing under protection self-employed farmers, professional people, and others.

Second, he would liberalize provisions governing outside earnings for the aged. Right now, any time a person under 75 years of age earns $75 a month on the outside, he loses that month's social security benefit. Mr. Eisenhower would allow an individual to make $1,000 a year in this manner without jeopardizing his government benefit.

Third, he would raise monthly payments. For those now retired, the existing individual minimum per month is $25, the maximum $85. The range for a man and wife is $37.50 and $127.50. Under the new plan, the individual lows and highs would be $30 and $98.50, the man and wife figures $45 and $147.75.

For people retiring in the future, the individual maximum would climb to $108.50, for a man and wife $162.75, as result of increased contributions.

At this time, both employer and employe contribute 2 per cent each on earnings up to $3,600 a year. That rate is slated to go up to 3 per cent by 1965. Mr. Eisenhower would hike it even higher, to 3.75 per cent, by 1970. And he would have this bite taken out of $4,200 a year instead of $3,600.

All these proposals can be argued for on reasonable grounds.

If the system is here to stay, as seems evident, then it ought fairly to cover as much of the working population as possible. No segment should suffer discrimination.

But certainly persons able and willing to continue working past retirement age ought to be encouraged to do so without penalty of loss of benefit. It appears reasonable, too, that contributions should gradually rise so that the ultimate return to the retired worker may be greater.

These principles put wise stress on self-help within a system of group protection.

At the same time, the plan to hike benefits makes sense, since the postwar inflation has sharply reduced the purchasing power of the dollar. What may have seemed an adequate minimum some years back can look pretty skimpy in today's markets.

By this program Mr. Eisenhower has offered hard, specific evidence that his concern for the average American is not a thing of mere high-sounding generalities. His proposals deserve the attention of his party and the whole Congress.

SLEEP TREATMENT OF MENTAL CASES

After living through World Wars 1 and 2, we are not surprised that so many men and women are suffering mentally and emotionally and that our mental clinics and mental institutions are fully occupied. In fact, if the shock method of treatment had not been discovered, many more mental hospitals would be needed.

It is of interest to learn that another method, rather than shock, of rendering a mental patient unconscious, is now giving excellent results in the hands of skilled psychiatrists.

The depth of the sleep and the duration of the treatment are less important than the degree of relaxation secured.

Treatment by this method proved safe even in aged patients with heart disease and high blood pressure.

"Strict medical supervision is required and the drugs used to block the nerve centers should be withdrawn gradually at the close of the treatment. The sleep produced is calm and the patients are relaxed and indifferent. Breathing is regular and the pulse usually normal, and there nearly always is a drop in the blood pressure."

This method of inducing prolonged sleep was used in treating 15 patients with various psychiatric conditions who had not been helped by other methods of treatment or whose general condition was too poor for shock treatment.

The best results from this prolonged sleep treatment were secured in patients who had symptoms of agitation and confusion and severe melancholy anxiety but substantial improvement was also noted in patients with mania.

Many of us may get discouraged as we realize that there are more patients in mental institutions than in all other hospitals combined but we should keep in mind that our psychiatrists were able to discharge to home and occupations the majority of patients before these new discoveries, the shock method of treatment and the refrigeration and nerve-block methods, were in use.

And now that many of our general hospitals are equipped with psychiatric wards, sometimes combining hospital with home treatment under hospital supervision, there is not the stigma of mental illness disturbing patient and family.

Edson's Washington News Notebook

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

Washington — (NEA) — When congressional hearings on President Eisenhower's proposed amendments to the Taft-Hartley labor law begin on Jan. 25, new Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell will be put on something of a spot. His embarrassment will arise over the most controversial of the President's proposals. This is for a government-supervised secret vote of employes on acceptance of the employer's offer, and whether or not there should be a strike.

As a loyal member of the cabinet, Secretary Mitchell will be bound to support the President's program. He has already announced publicly that since this is the President's program, he—Mitchell—is for it.

If, however, the secretary is asked for his personal opinion as an experienced labor relations man, whether this prestrike vote proposal will work, his answer may be something else.

That answer is fairly simple to deduce. What such a strike vote will boil down to in every case will be a question of whether the employes will accept—say five cents an hour increase, or whether they'll ask for 10 cents an hour.

When there was a provision of this kind in the wartime Smith-Connolly labor act, the vote was in favor of the higher demand and a strike in 97 per cent of the cases. This was at a time when there was an incentive of patriotism to stay on the job. Without that incentive, there is little reason to believe that the results would be much better.

Unsound, Say Labor Experts

Experienced labor relations men cite reasons on the unsoundness of this proposal. They believe it would be wrong to get the government in on a labor dispute this early. It would run counter to the idea of returning collective bargaining to management and labor, without government interference until the negotiations have broken down.

Also, when grievances are put in writing—as they would have to be for a secret ballot—the grievances have to be answered on the specific points brought up. That means less freedom to bargain and find a settlement on compromise terms.

The grand snafu over how this proposal got into the President's message to Congress, and why it was allowed to stay there can now be pretty well straightened out. Contrary to general belief, it can be stated authoritatively that both Secretary Mitchell and Republican Sen. Irving Ives of New York, the GOP's leading liberal on labor matters, were consulted on the matter. But they were not fully informed on the final language of the message.

The idea for the strike vote came from Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, as has been stated previously. Secretary Mitchell did not think the matter was terribly important. Secretary Weeks did. So Secretary Mitchell let the proposal go through. In so doing he misjudged the reaction of opposition from union labor leaders.

To say that the strike vote idea originated with Secretary Weeks is inaccurate. There was a similar provision in the first drafts of the original Taft-Hartley Act. There have been lots of hearings on this proposal. It was knocked out by Congress in 1947 because it had failed to function as expected in the Smith-Connolly Act. Secretary Weeks and his advisers simply made another attempt to get it back in.

May Endanger Other Proposals

There had been some hope that the strike vote proposal could be separated from the other parts of the President's message. Instead it was made point 12 of the 14-point proposal. This inclusion may endanger some of the other 13 points if Congress tries to handle the whole thing as a package deal.

The original drafts of the message had made clear that the proposed vote of the employes be taken before any strike could begin. The White House changed this in the final draft and specified no time for the vote. This led to a further gum-up on the proposal.

The President's idea in not specifying when the vote should be taken was a deliberate attempt to state a problem in genearl terms and leave it up to Congress to work out the details. Sen. H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, therefore swung into action fast with a bill to have the vote conducted after the strike had begun. This bill was obviously prepared in advance of the message and with foreknowledge of its content.

Senator Smith's idea was that the vote should be conducted after the employes had been out some time, and the economic pinch had begun to hurt. The argument against this is that if the vote were taken after the employes are out on strike, the employer would be reticent to make a final offer.

Congressional debate over this and other details will be long and bitter. The prospect is that it may be talked to death.

Tardy News Receipt in Foreign Nations Held Regrettable From U. S. Standpoint

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 27—Unfortunately newspaper headlines printed in the United States each day do not reach the people of Europe—at least not right away. So it is regrettable that the people of Great Britain, France and other European countries haven't seen yet the headlines of the last day or two in which it is emphasized in all the dispatches that Senator McCarthy "backed down" or "surrendered" or "retreated" in his controversy with three Democratic senators.

So much has been written abroad about Senator McCarthy as a "dictator," and repeated by returning American visitors, that the latest evidence should be instructive to Europeans. If the Wisconsin senator wasn't powerful enough even to dictate to a minority of his committee, he can't be much of a dictator. Yet abroad they speak of him as about to seize the reins of government any day.

What they fail to perceive in Europe is that in the United States public opinion is sovereign and that, when the three Democratic senators staged a walkout last summer because of their insistence that committee staff members be hired and fired by a majority of the committee rather than by the chairman, it was a significant protest. In due time heed was paid to this principle which, by the way, affects all congressional committees. For it should not be assumed that the present episode is the first in which the one-man power of the chairman has been asserted. It has happened just as often when the Democrats were in command of congressional committees, and what has just been adopted—to make a majority vote necessary—is, of course, a desirable reform.

But public opinion works in another way, too. Just as Senator McCarthy said that he didn't like to see one party manning the subcommittee and that the two-party system required representation of the minority as well as majority, it became important for the Democrats not to place themselves in the position of being unwilling to help investigate Communists in government and problems affecting governmental operations which the subcommittee of the committee on governmental operations is authorized to investigate.

So the controversy now has been resolved satisfactorily. It is a fact that Senator McCarthy reversed his position of last summer in the interest of committee harmony. Nobody was put in a concentration camp and nobody was seized and deprived of his right to free speech—and yet there are Americans and Europeans who have slandered the Wisconsin senator by calling him a "Hitler."

Senator McCarthy, moreover, has been attacked as having a presidential ambition. This is supposed to be an improper motive. The point has been made by McCarthy's enemies that he is engaged in the anti-Communist crusade merely to get publicity so he can run for President. What such observers fail to note is that neither political party in recent years—especially after the 1928 experience with the Al Smith candidacy—has shown signs of nominating any Catholic to the Presidency. "Liberals" have not said much about this form of discrimination, though the hero of the "Liberals" — Franklin D. Roosevelt— was charged in James A. Farley's book with having told a newspaper writer in 1940 that Farley couldn't be named for the vice presidency because of his religion.

For all practical purposes, there isn't the remotest chance that Senator McCarthy will ever be a candidate for the Presidency. This correspondent asked him for a statement on it recently, and he dictated the following:

"I have no interest and no ambition at all in that direction, to be nominated for President of the United States. I think I can do a better job where I am. No one has ever been nominated unless he has gone out for it, and I do not intend to go out for the nomination. There is no such thing as a draft. Unless you go out and work for a nomination, there is no draft.

"I think that pretty well covers it—about as positive as anyone can make it, I think. You'll find that it is not my friends who are talking about McCarthy being a candidate for President. With a very few exceptions, you'll find that those talking about McCarthy being a candidate for President have always been against me, and 90 per cent of them were not for Eisenhower in the last election and will not be for me in the next election, and they are trying to make it appear that I have some interest other than the public interest."

The Wisconsin senator never mentioned the religious barrier. But on Capitol Hill, among members of Congress who disagree with the senator, it is frequently mentioned in rebuttal to those who say Senator McCarthy is only interested in running for higher office.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, Jan. 26—This nation is a fortress against communism in Latin America and, thus, inevitably it has been the butt of a great deal of scurrility of a standard type. The head man, Rafael L. Trujillo, always called the generalissimo and benefactor of the republic, has been depicted as a bloody-handed dictator and the marvelous reforms which he has wrought since 1930 are minimized as mere "material" gains. Nevertheless, Trujillo has accomplished miracles which are the greater in the light of the fact that our government, under Roosevelt and Truman, harassed him all the time.

I had a visit with Trujillo a few days ago in his office in the magnificent capitol which he built and he plainly showed his hatred of the Americans in the White House and State Department who tried to help his enemies. I mentioned Eleanor Roosevelt and he shared my opinion, but the two individuals who are hated most are Spruille Braden and Ellis O. Briggs, who were ambassadors here before Eisenhower was elected.

The republic occupies about two-thirds of the island of Hispaniola. The other third, which is Haiti, lies to the west and is markedly "backward" by comparison. They were about alike until Trujillo came along and, like Mussolini, began hustling all over always in a thundering rush and accompanied by plenty of muscle, again like Mussolini, but also like Roosevelt and Truman, too, if you remember. He stood a fair chance of being potted had he not taken precautions.

Trujillo has built schools, waterworks, sewers and hospitals, a big university, and thousands of small homes for the workers, many of which I have seen, and brought internal peace and order. You take a chance of being knifed or garrotted on the streets and in the parks and subways of New York and the streets are a filthy disgrace, but there is almost no crime here and you could eat your lunch off any street in town.

The police, too, are clean and laundered. There is a spirit and appearance of happiness and friendliness unlike any that I have ever seen anywhere else and to a North American, the absolute indifference to color is a charming surprise. After a few days, I reflected that I was surprised at myself for being surprised because it would be so easy for us to cure our own situation, given the same mutual cooperation and good will.

The Communists tried to have it that the explosion along the Haitian border in 1937 in which an uncertain number of jungle types were killed and hacked up was a race war of the dominican nation against Haitian descendants of African slaves. But there are as many Negro dominicans as whites and they get along without the slightest appearance of self-consciousness.

I have had a Negro driver named Domingo for the last couple of weeks, and he has seemed puzzled by my questions about discrimination. It has never occurred in his experience.

A few nights ago I went to a reception for the generalissimo by the new ambassador from Argentina, General Martini, and there were, I should say, at least a dozen Negro army officers and their wives mingling with the other brass and the prelacy, who included the archbishop of Santo Domingo, primate of the Antilles, Richard Pittini. He is an aged gentleman and scholar and is stone blind new just from the wear and tear of life and reading. Our own new ambassador, William Pheiffer, had occasion to call on him soon after he checked in and after a little habla he was calling Pheiffer Bill and invited Pheiffer to call him Dick. When I was fixing to go at the end of my visit he cautioned me to be careful on the winding coral stairs in the ancient cathedral. I said never mind me, I could see, but couldn't I guide him back to his personal quarters? He said no, he had eyes in his fingers.

The gala by the Argentine ambassador was something out of the old courts of Paris and Vienna. The party was given at a night club called Voz Dominicana where they deal craps and roulette in a casino off the main room. The main table was as long as a bowling alley and was covered by a lace cloth which an authority tells me was something very elite. Trujillo and his brother, who is now president of the republic, Trujillo's son, who is a general, and numerous other members of the family were up and down the board and I hadn't seen so much gold braid and stuff since the lying in state of George V. But, why shouldn't they put on some dog? They have a flair for it and the Court of St. James is no more authentic than this one.

Flor Trujillo was there too, a very vivacious young woman who was one of the wives of Porfirio Rubirosa, the spectacular international stew who did a short hitch as husband to Doris Duke and is now tied up with Barbara Hutton. Flor gets around very informally and I met her again at dinner at the home of some American kids and still another time at the Brazilian ambassador's home. This statesman's name is Paulo G. Hasslocher and he is a walking compendium of statistics. He fizzes like a seidlitz powder but he knows how many automobiles there are in Honduras, the annual wage of the laboring class in Brazil and Pennsylvania, and the mean average rainfall of Minnesota where he used to spend vacations fishing around Virginia in the iron country.

He came up to my table where I was sitting in my trunks by the pool and told me who he was and said he knew a lot of American newspaper men in Washington. He started to name them—"Drew Pearson—."

I said "He is a louse!" The ambassador said, "Yes, and I know Walter Trohan, Lyle Wilson and Bill Hutch. I know Arthur Krock, too."

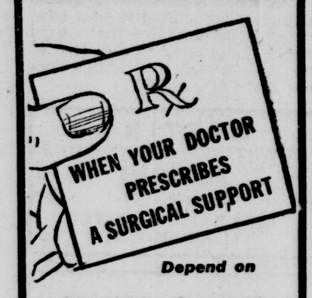

So he said come on out to his house for a drink tomorrow so I did and he had a dozen cases of Mumms stacked in the hall and insisted on giving me a bottle and another of very refined scotch as well. Mrs. Hasslocher is a very pretty blonde from Newark. She sings. The French ambassador was there and last night I saw him in the casino of the Jaragua Hotel, going against the wheel. Our embassy is very de luxe. It has not only an office building but a beautiful mansion with a swimming pool and a lot of land. We did have more but sold some to Trujillo for the generalissimo's palace.

There is a small marine guard attached to the embassy but they go in mufti because the uniform might poke up memories of the occupation which all hands want to forget. Trujillo has made this a swanky world capital in the diplomatic sense with all these embassies and it does something good to the national and popular morale, you can be sure, because most of the people can remember when this town was a dirty old Spanish-Indian-Negro settlement on a ragged coral shore and they caught water in cisterns from their roofs and drank mosquitoes and larvae with it.

Lions Hear Kramer On Juvenile School

A report on the school of juvenile delinquency held last year at St. Lawrence University under the sponsorship of the New York State Youth Commission was given at the Tuesday luncheon meeting of the Lions Club by City Clerk Bernhardt S. Kramer.

Kramer, Recreation Director Andrew J. Murphy, 3rd, and Patrolman Thomas Tomshaw attended the week-long sessions as representatives of this city.

The various preventive measures taken against juvenile delinquency in New York city and elsewhere were outlined by Kramer, who also discussed each of the three major areas influencing juvenile behavior—the home, the church and the school.

The Lions Club meeting was held at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Think It Through

By EDWARD F. HUTTON

The Constitution and Bill of Rights do not mention that the Incentive to Produce, with a profit attached, is unconstitutional. I say this, although history of the past 20 years would seem to indicate that a lot of people consider it a crime to make a profit.

And it behooves all of us to protect the Bill of Rights or we shall have an economy and a government which we will not like.

Mr. Hutton

Today, with few exceptions, the world is run by governments of varying shades of socialism. Let's see how things are going.

In one country of Europe is a truck factory. The people—lured by bright promises—threw out the capitalists years ago so they could "get a greater share of the fruits of their labor...."

The workers in this truck factory I mentioned earn an average of 40 dollars a month. The American workers in the same kind of factory average $400 a month. The Socialists who tossed out the profit and loss system in this foreign nation I refer to, now sell trucks for the equivalent of about 8,000 American dollars. It is an inferior truck which sells in America for about $2,500. The same truck we produce at that price is of high quality and the cost still leaves room for profit to labor and management.

The moral seems clear; destroy the profit and loss system and both management and labor fall flat on their backs.

Profit is a "welfare worker" and is the best device known to improve the quality of production—competition makes it work that way. It also works to put more money in pay checks and make more merchandise available at reasonable cost.

How did America get the right to produce with a profit? It's your Bill of Rights, neighbor. Let's protect it.

Expectant Father, 22, Is Held In Rape-Slaying of Girl, 15

Levittown, Pa., Jan. 27 (AP)—A young neighbor whose wife is pregnant confessed to police that he fatally shot pretty 15-year-old Marta Gibbons because she "threatened to tell" that he raped her.

The rape-slaying occurred Friday night. Marta's partly-nude, near-frozen body was discovered Monday near a lake shore lover's lane. Last night the arrest was made.

State Police Sgt. Adrian McCarr identified George Capps, 22, a veteran of the Korean fighting, as the confessed killer.

McCarr said Capps lured Marta from her home, where she was minding her six-year-old sister, drove her in his car to nearby Curtis Lake, and there assaulted her in the back seat after ripping off part of her clothes.

Then, the policeman said in disclosing the confession, Capps brutally beat the girl and shot her as she tried to run away after threatening to tell his (Capp's) wife, Mabel, 21, who is expecting their first child.

Charged With Murder

Capps was charged formally with murder at a hearing last night. He was held without bail for a further hearing Feb. 9.

His wife sobbed loudly. Before her husband's arrest Mrs. Capps had told newsmen that wives in the vicinity of the slain girl's home feared to open their doors because the killer might strike again.

Police said Capps actually joined in the search for Marta after her father reported her missing on Saturday.

Knew Her Casually

Capps and the slain girl knew each other only casually before Friday night, McCarr said.

Marta's body was found in a gravel pit alongside the secluded lake, a mile from her home. That was 36 hours before Capps' arrest.

McCarr said Capps, wounded in the shoulder in Korea, told this story of the slaying:

On Friday night he went to a neighbor's home where Marta was baby-sitting. He told her about repairs he was making to an auto owned by Marta's step-father. William Gourley, the step-father, was visiting Marta's mother in nearby Philadelphia where she is hospitalized with a heart ailment.

Shot as She Fled

The discussion was brief and Capps soon left. Later, when Marta had returned to her own home, Capps showed up again and somehow lured the girl to his car.

He drove to Curtis Lake. After the assault, Marta struggled free, jumped from the car and sobbingly threatened to tell Capp's wife. He began beating her and, enraged by her screams, reached into the car for a gun. He shot her through the head as she fled in terror.

McCarr said the arrest was made after cartridges found in Capps' home matched a spent shell that lay near the victim's body.

Lions Hear Kramer On Juvenile School

A report on the school of juvenile delinquency held last year at St. Lawrence University under the sponsorship of the New York State Youth Commission was given at the Tuesday luncheon meeting of the Lions Club by City Clerk Bernhardt S. Kramer.

Kramer, Recreation Director Andrew J. Murphy, 3rd, and Patrolman Thomas Tomshaw attended the week-long sessions as representatives of this city.

The various preventive measures taken against juvenile delinquency in New York city and elsewhere were outlined by Kramer, who also discussed each of the three major areas influencing juvenile behavior—the home, the church and the school.

The Lions Club meeting was held at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Think It Through

By EDWARD F. HUTTON

The Constitution and Bill of Rights do not mention that the Incentive to Produce, with a profit attached, is unconstitutional. I say this, although history of the past 20 years would seem to indicate that a lot of people consider it a crime to make a profit.

And it behooves all of us to protect the Bill of Rights or we shall have an economy and a government which we will not like.

Mr. Hutton

Today, with few exceptions, the world is run by governments of varying shades of socialism. Let's see how things are going.

In one country of Europe is a truck factory. The people—lured by bright promises—threw out the capitalists years ago so they could "get a greater share of the fruits of their labor...."

The workers in this truck factory I mentioned earn an average of 40 dollars a month. The American workers in the same kind of factory average $400 a month. The Socialists who tossed out the profit and loss system in this foreign nation I refer to, now sell trucks for the equivalent of about 8,000 American dollars. It is an inferior truck which sells in America for about $2,500. The same truck we produce at that price is of high quality and the cost still leaves room for profit to labor and management.

The moral seems clear; destroy the profit and loss system and both management and labor fall flat on their backs.

Profit is a "welfare worker" and is the best device known to improve the quality of production—competition makes it work that way. It also works to put more money in pay checks and make more merchandise available at reasonable cost.

How did America get the right to produce with a profit? It's your Bill of Rights, neighbor. Let's protect it.

Expectant Father, 22, Is Held In Rape-Slaying of Girl, 15

Levittown, Pa., Jan. 27 (AP)—A young neighbor whose wife is pregnant confessed to police that he fatally shot pretty 15-year-old Marta Gibbons because she "threatened to tell" that he raped her.

The rape-slaying occurred Friday night. Marta's partly-nude, near-frozen body was discovered Monday near a lake shore lover's lane. Last night the arrest was made.

State Police Sgt. Adrian McCarr identified George Capps, 22, a veteran of the Korean fighting, as the confessed killer.

McCarr said Capps lured Marta from her home, where she was minding her six-year-old sister, drove her in his car to nearby Curtis Lake, and there assaulted her in the back seat after ripping off part of her clothes.

Then, the policeman said in disclosing the confession, Capps brutally beat the girl and shot her as she tried to run away after threatening to tell his (Capp's) wife, Mabel, 21, who is expecting their first child.

Charged With Murder

Capps was charged formally with murder at a hearing last night. He was held without bail for a further hearing Feb. 9.

His wife sobbed loudly. Before her husband's arrest Mrs. Capps had told newsmen that wives in the vicinity of the slain girl's home feared to open their doors because the killer might strike again.

Police said Capps actually joined in the search for Marta after her father reported her missing on Saturday.

Knew Her Casually

Capps and the slain girl knew each other only casually before Friday night, McCarr said.

Marta's body was found in a gravel pit alongside the secluded lake, a mile from her home. That was 36 hours before Capps' arrest.

McCarr said Capps, wounded in the shoulder in Korea, told this story of the slaying:

On Friday night he went to a neighbor's home where Marta was baby-sitting. He told her about repairs he was making to an auto owned by Marta's step-father. William Gourley, the step-father, was visiting Marta's mother in nearby Philadelphia where she is hospitalized with a heart ailment.

Shot as She Fled

The discussion was brief and Capps soon left. Later, when Marta had returned to her own home, Capps showed up again and somehow lured the girl to his car.

He drove to Curtis Lake. After the assault, Marta struggled free, jumped from the car and sobbingly threatened to tell Capp's wife. He began beating her and, enraged by her screams, reached into the car for a gun. He shot her through the head as she fled in terror.

McCarr said the arrest was made after cartridges found in Capps' home matched a spent shell that lay near the victim's body.

Legion Stresses Strong U. S., Backs Bingo at Albany Dinner

American Legionnaires at the 35th annual legislative dinner of the Department of New York in Albany, Tuesday night, were urged to "do a job for America," in one speech, heard a report from the legislative committee backing measures to legalize bingo, and were asked to support compulsory automobile insurance.

Approximately 400 attended the dinner in the Ten Eyck Hotel, where Arthur J. Connell, national commander, was the featured speaker, and Governor Thomas E. Dewey sat on the dais with Legion and civic leaders. The dinner is held every year to honor world war veterans of the legislature.

Connell said the Legion had been organized to "do a job for America" to keep America strong and free, beloved by its citizens, respected by its friends, and feared by its enemies. In his address to the meeting Commander Connell outlined the important points of the Legion's important programs, including veterans' rehabilitation, child welfare, Americanism and National Security.

Service to Community

"All four concern matters in which the veteran has a personal, unique interest because he is a veteran. All four involve service to the community," he said. He added that the State of New York has a reputation "around the country" for being out in front in the matter of civil defense, and urged posts to continue this fine work.

A series of committee meetings were held during the day.

Governor Dewey requested that the Legion support his program for compulsory automobile insurance in an effort to stamp out the state's great unprotected damage from uninsured operators.

In reference to that matter National Commander Connell stated that he was "behind" the governor on that program.

Bonus and Bingo

The legislative committee, under chairmanship of George L. Bliss, of Mt. Vernon, passed a resolution calling for an amendment to the proposed constitutional amendment now before the legislature so that a state bonus would be limited to men who served in the Korean war theatre. The committee also backed legislation which would legalize bingo playing when conducted by veteran, religious, charitable and other non-profitable organizations.

The committee on oratory revised the granting of scholarship awards, dividing the $4,000 prize into three parts. First award will be $2,500, second $1,500 and the third $500. The zone contest will be held in Albany on March 5 with state finals at Glens Falls on March 20.

John B. Ryan, Jr., past Rensselaer county commander, was said to have practically secured enough ballots to elect him New York State Department Commander at the state Legion convention in August. He is opposed by J. Walter Vaeth of Utica and Gilbert Chichester of Nassau county.

Commander Samuels Reports

A report was made on membership by John B. Ryan, Jr., and Paul S. Samuels, state commander, also addressed the meeting.

Among those who attended the sessions from this area were Commander Thomas Saccoman of Kingston Post, Lester Elmendorf, Thomas Bohan, Peter Keresman, the Rev. Clarance Brown, Edward Coty, Stanley Lawrence, Richard Van Keuren, Walter J. Miller, A. J. Murphy, Jr., and A. J. Murphy, 3rd, Meyer Kaplan, James G. Connelly, Donald Moore, Robert Van Gaasbeek and several others who because of the scattered location of the committee meeting were not identified.

Find Wanted Criminal

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (AP)—One of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives, a man whose wife didn't even know he was wanted by the law, was captured without trouble last night in an industrial district of Los Angeles where he was working. FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover in Washington and the local FBI office announced that Alex Richard Bryant, 47, was unarmed and offered no resistance when he was arrested at a trucking company where he was empolyed as a truck spotter. The FBI said Bryant, who had been living here with his wife and one child under the name of Edward F. Lawson, has spent all but seven months of his adult life behind prison bars or as a fugitive. The federal agents said he has a criminal history dating back to 1924. Bryant was serving a life sentence for armed robbery when he escaped from the Michigan State Penitentiary at Jackson on Jan. 24, 1952. His wife said they were married in September of 1952.

Proposal Is Rejected

Middletown, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP)—This city's voters yesterday rejected a board of education proposal for a $595,000 bond issue for construction of two new elementary schools. The vote was 1,599 to 1,400. They also rejected a board of education proposal for a ¼ of 1 per cent increase—from 1¼ to 1½ per cent—in the school tax limit. This vote was 1,616 to 1,451. The voting was light in all eight school districts, with about 35 per cent of the city's 8,000 eligible voters casting ballots.

Madrid, Spain, Jan. 27 (AP)—Spanish students and police clashed here today for the third day in succession and again there were wounded on both sides. At one time some of the students blockaded themselves in the university when police tried to enter to talk things over. The police wanted to persuade the students to cease their demonstrations which began Monday with a manifestation for the return of Gibraltar to Spain.

2. The senate could substitute for that clause by majority vote—which GOP leaders claimed they could muster—a provision acceptable to the President or an entirely new draft.

Could Use Vote Alternative

3. If Bricker and his followers refused to accept this action, their alternative would be to vote against the revised version on passage. That evidently would mean the amendment would not muster the needed two-thirds majority. It would thus be dead, and present constitutional provisions would remain intact. Bricker has said he would accept a Senate decision.

4. A majority of the Senate could postpone a showdown by voting to send the whole measure back to its judiciary committee for further study—as proposed by Sen. Morse (Ind.-Ore.).

Eisenhower has said he would support an amendment which says that no treaty or international agreement can contravene the Constitution. But he obviously would rather have no amendment at all than one he contends would hamper American relations with other nations.

Eisenhower Contention

Eisenhower has contended that Bricker's proposal, as written, would subject some treaties to approval by the 48 states.

The President was reported in authoritative quarters to have swung behind a new proposal that future treaties made "persuant" to the Constitution would become the supreme law of the land. This proposal would open treaties and executive agreements to court review of whether they infringed on the traditional division of powers between the state and federal governments.

Handed this proposal by Sen. Ferguson (R.-Mich.) yesterday, Bricker said he wanted time to study it further.

Costello Paid Visit

entitled to know its admissions and derelictions of duty."

Donovan's letter today to Bannigan repeated the position of the Correction Department that the publication of names of visitors to prison inmates was against public interest and inimical to the efficient administration of the prison system.

Replying to Bannigan's questions, Harry J. O'Donnell, Dewey's press secretary, said in a statement:

"Mr. Bannigan asks who made the arrangements for these visitors to see Luciano in prison and what these men had to do with the war effort.

"The arrangements were made in May, 1942, when Gov. Dewey was a private citizen and had no information on the subject.

"Mr. Bannigan will have to address his questions to Sen. Lehman, who was governor at the time."

It was reported unofficially that the four visitors named by Bannigan had gone to see Luciano before 1943.

Europe Has Cold Wave

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—Chilling winds whirling in from the Russian steppes, sent temperatures to the lowest point in years today throughout Europe. The weather man said more of the same was in store. Ice and snow hampered sea and road travel. In northern Greece, shivering in the coldest winter in 61 years, marauding wolf packs padded up to the outskirts of some cities in search for food. Britain chalked up its coldest night in two years.

Chamber Letters Back Arterial Plan, Kurdt Says

Local approval of the arterial route plan in principle would open the way for the city to take advantage of "its close proximity to a thruway interchange," Albert Kurdt, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said in a statement released today.

Kurdt said: "The Kingston Chamber of Commerce is officially and unequivocally in favor of promptly adopting the general plan for arterial highway routes in the City of Kingston as proposed by the New York State Department of Public Works.

Kurdt's statement was "based upon the action taken by the board of directors Monday afternoon."

A circular letter was sent to more than 400 members of the chamber, Kurdt said. It asked them to express their opinions. Replies were read at the board meeting "and the report of the arterial route and traffic committee was thoroughly discussed before action was taken," he stressed.

Asked in Principle

Adoption of the proposal is only asked in principle at this time, but such local action would permit the state to put the 5.2 miles of city streets officially on the state highway map.

If this can be done, he explained, the state would take over the cost of construction, repair, reconstruction, maintenance and snow removal on such streets, and would relieve local taxpayers of such costs on the heavily travelled streets.

The entire arterial route program of the state "is a policy of tax relief for counties and cities for the building of adequate arteries to carry heavy through traffic," Kurdt said.

"The Common Council and the Ulster County Board of Supervisors," he continued, "should adopt the proposed arterial route plan as quickly as possible to enable consummation of the plan before the entire thruway is completed. This would enable Kingston to take advantage of its close proximity to a thruway interchange, expand its trading area, and in general encourage expansion of all forms of trade, industry, business and services within the city limits."

May Force Business Out

Unless better and adequate access to the various parts of our city is provided, "including the ease of getting to and from work," he stressed, "we will force our expanding business to locate outside of the city limits."

The statement explained further:

"We would not only get the benefits of the huge payrolls which are part of any $2,268,000.00 construction project, but the following figures are quoted to show that the city would benefit directly and financially by the proposed project. Slightly less than $110,000.00 of assessed valuation would be lost if the complete project as proposed were carried out. This represents a loss of about $7500.00 annually in taxes. This loss is approximately equal to the direct annual payments which the state would make to the city for the cost of repair, maintenance and snow removal of the 5.2 miles of streets. If all of the proposed rights of way were eventually acquired, the cost to the city would be $261,000.00. This amount, plus interest, on bonds issued, would be less than the cost of rebuilding these streets during the next 10 to 20 years. Broadway needs rebuilding now. This does not take increased assessments into consideration from new and enlarged business establishments needed for the expansion coming to the city and area and the assessed valuation of new homes required."

Must Be Approved

"Under the provisions of the State Highway Laws applicable to city arterial routes, the general plan must be approved first, which places no direct financial obligation on the city. After the State Legislature places certain streets on the State Highway Map, detailed plans, costs, necessary rights of way, etc., of each part of the overall plan must be prepared by the state and presented to the Common Council. No part of the proposed plan can be started or the city required to pay anything until the Common Council approves each detailed part of the plan. Actual construction of any part could be delayed after the final details are known. Approval permits us to find out what the details will be."

"In the resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce the State was asked to make certain further studies before making final plans," Kurdt continued, "but this did not mean partial approval of the general plan. The State law designating the streets which would become part of the State Highway system could be amended later if the suggestions involving additional streets should be found to be in the best interests of the public."

"If approval of the general plan is delayed too long, we may lose the opportunity of making necessary major improvements to our through street system and ultimately find it necessary to pay the entire cost ourselves. Many other cities are asking for similar proposals. Neighboring cities are actually in this position now after finding out that they are not getting a reasonable share of expansion taking place in their area."

"The Kingston Chamber of Commerce realizes that no progress is made without adversely affecting somebody and is sincerely sympathetic with those so affected. The majority of citizens, however, want the Common Council to vote in favor of improvements which ultimately cost our local taxpayers nothing but which place Kingston in a position to take advantage of and benefit by the expansion coming to the area. The Thruway can take visitors, customers and employees away from town or it can be used to bring them here. We must prepare to grow with the rest of Ulster county. Are we going to help or retard this expansion?" the statement concluded.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Jan. 27 (AP) — A quick forward surge in the stock market today ran into profit-taking that blunted the advance.

Buying was encouraged by the strength of yesterday's market, and the pace was so swift at the opening that the ticker fell behind briefly in reporting floor transactions at the New York Stock Exchange.

After the initial rush spent itself, trading was more quiet with prices milling around aimlessly at the best levels. Therefore a slow retreat from the best began.

Gains went to between 1 and 2 points at the top with some losses extending down by that amount. Most changes, however, were small with plus signs predominating.

Volume was a heavy 550,000 shares the first hour and maintained a rate better than yesterday's level of 2,120,000 shares, which was the second highest total of this year.

The steels did rather well along with railroads, oils, rubbers, electric shares, and building materials.

Legion Stresses Strong U. S., Backs Bingo at Albany Dinner

American Legionnaires at the 35th annual legislative dinner of the Department of New York in Albany, Tuesday night, were urged to "do a job for America," in one speech, heard a report from the legislative committee backing measures to legalize bingo, and were asked to support compulsory automobile insurance.

Approximately 400 attended the dinner in the Ten Eyck Hotel, where Arthur J. Connell, national commander, was the featured speaker, and Governor Thomas E. Dewey sat on the dais with Legion and civic leaders. The dinner is held every year to honor world war veterans of the legislature.

Connell said the Legion had been organized to "do a job for America" to keep America strong and free, beloved by its citizens, respected by its friends, and feared by its enemies. In his address to the meeting Commander Connell outlined the important points of the Legion's important programs, including veterans' rehabilitation, child welfare, Americanism and National Security.

Service to Community

"All four concern matters in which the veteran has a personal, unique interest because he is a veteran. All four involve service to the community," he said. He added that the State of New York has a reputation "around the country" for being out in front in the matter of civil defense, and urged posts to continue this fine work.

A series of committee meetings were held during the day.

Governor Dewey requested that the Legion support his program for compulsory automobile insurance in an effort to stamp out the state's great unprotected damage from uninsured operators.

In reference to that matter National Commander Connell stated that he was "behind" the governor on that program.

Bonus and Bingo

The legislative committee, under chairmanship of George L. Bliss, of Mt. Vernon, passed a resolution calling for an amendment to the proposed constitutional amendment now before the legislature so that a state bonus would be limited to men who served in the Korean war theatre. The committee also backed legislation which would legalize bingo playing when conducted by veteran, religious, charitable and other non-profitable organizations.

The committee on oratory revised the granting of scholarship awards, dividing the $4,000 prize into three parts. First award will be $2,500, second $1,500 and the third $500. The zone contest will be held in Albany on March 5 with state finals at Glens Falls on March 20.

John B. Ryan, Jr., past Rensselaer county commander, was said to have practically secured enough ballots to elect him New York State Department Commander at the state Legion convention in August. He is opposed by J. Walter Vaeth of Utica and Gilbert Chichester of Nassau county.

Commander Samuels Reports

A report was made on membership by John B. Ryan, Jr., and Paul S. Samuels, state commander, also addressed the meeting.

Among those who attended the sessions from this area were Commander Thomas Saccoman of Kingston Post, Lester Elmendorf, Thomas Bohan, Peter Keresman, the Rev. Clarance Brown, Edward Coty, Stanley Lawrence, Richard Van Keuren, Walter J. Miller, A. J. Murphy, Jr., and A. J. Murphy, 3rd, Meyer Kaplan, James G. Connelly, Donald Moore, Robert Van Gaasbeek and several others who because of the scattered location of the committee meeting were not identified.

Find Wanted Criminal

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (AP)—One of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives, a man whose wife didn't even know he was wanted by the law, was captured without trouble last night in an industrial district of Los Angeles where he was working. FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover in Washington and the local FBI office announced that Alex Richard Bryant, 47, was unarmed and offered no resistance when he was arrested at a trucking company where he was empolyed as a truck spotter. The FBI said Bryant, who had been living here with his wife and one child under the name of Edward F. Lawson, has spent all but seven months of his adult life behind prison bars or as a fugitive. The federal agents said he has a criminal history dating back to 1924. Bryant was serving a life sentence for armed robbery when he escaped from the Michigan State Penitentiary at Jackson on Jan. 24, 1952. His wife said they were married in September of 1952.

Proposal Is Rejected

Middletown, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP)—This city's voters yesterday rejected a board of education proposal for a $595,000 bond issue for construction of two new elementary schools. The vote was 1,599 to 1,400. They also rejected a board of education proposal for a ¼ of 1 per cent increase—from 1¼ to 1½ per cent—in the school tax limit. This vote was 1,616 to 1,451. The voting was light in all eight school districts, with about 35 per cent of the city's 8,000 eligible voters casting ballots.

New Clash Occurs

Madrid, Spain, Jan. 27 (AP)—Spanish students and police clashed here today for the third day in succession and again there were wounded on both sides. At one time some of the students blockaded themselves in the university when police tried to enter to talk things over. The police wanted to persuade the students to cease their demonstrations which began Monday with a manifestation for the return of Gibraltar to Spain.

Reports Blast Damage

Mrs. Kathleen Middaugh, of 178 Fairview avenue, notified local police at 4:19 p. m. yesterday that a heavy blast apparently set off in the area of thruway construction, damaged dishes and cracked walls and ceilings in her home. She was advised to notify the branch office of the state public works department at Poughkeepsie.

Chamber Letters Back Arterial Plan, Kurdt Says

Local approval of the arterial route plan in principle would open the way for the city to take advantage of "its close proximity to a thruway interchange," Albert Kurdt, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said in a statement released today.

Kurdt said: "The Kingston Chamber of Commerce is officially and unequivocally in favor of promptly adopting the general plan for arterial highway routes in the City of Kingston as proposed by the New York State Department of Public Works.

Kurdt's statement was "based upon the action taken by the board of directors Monday afternoon."

A circular letter was sent to more than 400 members of the chamber, Kurdt said. It asked them to express their opinions. Replies were read at the board meeting "and the report of the arterial route and traffic committee was thoroughly discussed before action was taken," he stressed.

Asked in Principle

Adoption of the proposal is only asked in principle at this time, but such local action would permit the state to put the 5.2 miles of city streets officially on the state highway map.

If this can be done, he explained, the state would take over the cost of construction, repair, reconstruction, maintenance and snow removal on such streets, and would relieve local taxpayers of such costs on the heavily travelled streets.

The entire arterial route program of the state "is a policy of tax relief for counties and cities for the building of adequate arteries to carry heavy through traffic," Kurdt said.

"The Common Council and the Ulster County Board of Supervisors," he continued, "should adopt the proposed arterial route plan as quickly as possible to enable consummation of the plan before the entire thruway is completed. This would enable Kingston to take advantage of its close proximity to a thruway interchange, expand its trading area, and in general encourage expansion of all forms of trade, industry, business and services within the city limits."

May Force Business Out

Unless better and adequate access to the various parts of our city is provided, "including the ease of getting to and from work," he stressed, "we will force our expanding business to locate outside of the city limits."

The statement explained further:

"We would not only get the benefits of the huge payrolls which are part of any $2,268,000.00 construction project, but the following figures are quoted to show that the city would benefit directly and financially by the proposed project. Slightly less than $110,000.00 of assessed valuation would be lost if the complete project as proposed were carried out. This represents a loss of about $7500.00 annually in taxes. This loss is approximately equal to the direct annual payments which the state would make to the city for the cost of repair, maintenance and snow removal of the 5.2 miles of streets. If all of the proposed rights of way were eventually acquired, the cost to the city would be $261,000.00. This amount, plus interest, on bonds issued, would be less than the cost of rebuilding these streets during the next 10 to 20 years. Broadway needs rebuilding now. This does not take increased assessments into consideration from new and enlarged business establishments needed for the expansion coming to the city and area and the assessed valuation of new homes required."

Must Be Approved

"Under the provisions of the State Highway Laws applicable to city arterial routes, the general plan must be approved first, which places no direct financial obligation on the city. After the State Legislature places certain streets on the State Highway Map, detailed plans, costs, necessary rights of way, etc., of each part of the overall plan must be prepared by the state and presented to the Common Council. No part of the proposed plan can be started or the city required to pay anything until the Common Council approves each detailed part of the plan. Actual construction of any part could be delayed after the final details are known. Approval permits us to find out what the details will be."

"In the resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce the State was asked to make certain further studies before making final plans," Kurdt continued, "but this did not mean partial approval of the general plan. The State law designating the streets which would become part of the State Highway system could be amended later if the suggestions involving additional streets should be found to be in the best interests of the public."

"If approval of the general plan is delayed too long, we may lose the opportunity of making necessary major improvements to our through street system and ultimately find it necessary to pay the entire cost ourselves. Many other cities are asking for similar proposals. Neighboring cities are actually in this position now after finding out that they are not getting a reasonable share of expansion taking place in their area."

"The Kingston Chamber of Commerce realizes that no progress is made without adversely affecting somebody and is sincerely sympathetic with those so affected. The majority of citizens, however, want the Common Council to vote in favor of improvements which ultimately cost our local taxpayers nothing but which place Kingston in a position to take advantage of and benefit by the expansion coming to the area. The Thruway can take visitors, customers and employees away from town or it can be used to bring them here. We must prepare to grow with the rest of Ulster county. Are we going to help or retard this expansion?" the statement concluded.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Jan. 27 (AP) — A quick forward surge in the stock market today ran into profit-taking that blunted the advance.

Buying was encouraged by the strength of yesterday's market, and the pace was so swift at the opening that the ticker fell behind briefly in reporting floor transactions at the New York Stock Exchange.

After the initial rush spent itself, trading was more quiet with prices milling around aimlessly at the best levels. Therefore a slow retreat from the best began.

Gains went to between 1 and 2 points at the top with some losses extending down by that amount. Most changes, however, were small with plus signs predominating.

Volume was a heavy 550,000 shares the first hour and maintained a rate better than yesterday's level of 2,120,000 shares, which was the second highest total of this year.

The steels did rather well along with railroads, oils, rubbers, electric shares, and building materials.

VD Rate Surprising

Little Rock, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas' new marriage law—which requires a pre-marial blood test — is turning up venereal disease at a rate that surprises even the head of the state's VD control program. Dr. Clifford Cole reports that 3.6 per cent of those tested are diseased. A 1 per cent positive rate is "high" and 1½ per cent is "very high," Cole says.

Even experts have trouble with hands in which both sides bid to a high level. It becomes difficult to tell which side the hand really "belongs" to, and it becomes equally difficult to tell when your side gets out of its depth.

To put it specifically, the question is: Should you double, pass, or bid some more?

When you try to answer this question you must consider many different factors: what you think the opponents can make, what you think your side can make, the suitability of your hand for offense and for defense.

If you are the last person to speak, you must make a decision; but if the bidding will surely give your partner another chance to speak, you must avoid definite action with an indefinite sort of hand.

The point is illustrated in today's hand. South had a perfectly sound overcall of one spade. North's jump to four spades was a bit on the sporting side, but quite reasonable. South would be able to make four spades with many hands that were just minimum overcalls of one spade; and if the enemy decided to bid five of either red suit, North was ready for them.

East's bid of five diamonds was a stab. He couldn't tell whether or not four spades could be made and decided to believe the opponents. It was clear that five diamonds couldn't be badly hurt.

When East took a stab at five diamonds there was no need for South to do anything at all. If South had held more defensive strength, he could double. If South had held all of his strength in spades and none elsewhere, he could properly bid five spades. With his actual hand the right course was to sit back and let North make the decision. North would have been happy to double, of course, and the contract of five diamonds would have been defeated.

When South tried to bid for his partner as well as for himself, he was justly punished. West doubled, and the contract of five spades was set three tricks for a penalty of 500 points.

There wasn't much to the play. West opened his singleton heart, and dummy won with the ace. Declarer tackled the trumps at once, and West took his two trump tricks. West then led the queen of diamonds. There was no way for South to prevent the loss of a diamond, a club, and a heart in addition to the two trump tricks.

Equality of Opportunity

Editor, The Freeman:

In every community you will find wonderful, well-meaning people devoting their time and money to worthwhile undertakings. It is indeed strange to see and hear these same people pleading for funds to find a cure and prevention for polio and other diseases that have long been conquered by drugless healing professions.

The public is being asked to raise many millions of dollars this year to aid a profession that grossed over nine billion dollars last year. With full support by multi-million dollar drug concerns, which spend millions of dollars each year advertising through all mediums of public information, you can see how easy it becomes to suppress any harmful publicity that would cut into their huge profits.

For instance: "The United Nations World Health Organization meeting in Rome Sept. 19, 1953 under the chairmanship of Dr. John A. Paul of Yale University School of Medicine, reported the complete failure of all medical efforts to control polio and condemned the widespread administration of gamma globulin."

This profession, being the first strongly organized healing profession on the national scene, had laws passed by the federal, state and local governments giving its members the exclusive concession in hospitals, schools, prisons and public institutions, government service and armed forces.

As the Roman Church is the first, oldest and largest—why not make it legally compulsory for a Catholic priest to sit in judgment as to the necessity of the Protestant minister or Jewish rabbi's services?

"Undemocratic! Outrageous!" But this does exist in the healing profession in this city, state and nation.

The sick and crippled children need help and when the science of chiropratic can give that help, it is time for the American public to see that equality of opportunity exists for all, especially the crippled children.

The Mature Parent

Maybe We're Afraid to Talk To Next-Door Bully's Parents

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

Still bothering a reader is the case of the violent four-year-old boy recently discussed in this column. He injured his sister, you may recall; got spanked and then went calling on a neighbor who slammed her door in his face.

A Mrs. E. sympathizes with the neighbor. "I am tired of other people's untrained children," she writes. "I have known many of these neighborhood hoodlums who menace decent children, and I see no reason why I should welcome one into my house."

We don't wish to entertain violence, no matter what age it is. That's an understandable position — but why the slamming of the door in his face? Why the violence in response to violence?

If we fear danger to Patsy from the small hoodlum next door, why don't we say so to his parents? Why don't we say to them, "Until Billy's temper comes under control, we feel that he and Patsy better stop playing together"?

Perhaps we don't say this because it is usually hard to say.

For the parents of uncontrolled Billy are apt to be uncontrolled themselves. Like him, they may be so uncertain of themselves that they react with belligerence to any suggestion that their behavior is imperfect.

They may be so frightened by the disapproval implicit in our wish to keep Patsy from playing with Billy that they may make a most unpleasant scene.

Because they may not be able to take the idea that they may be at fault, they will place the blame for Billy's violence upon us. And we may find ourselves the target of abuse about everything from our church attendance to the way we comb Patsy's hair.

We usually sense such unpleasant emotional possibilities in these people without quite knowing that we do. And because we do not like to know that we are afraid of their irrational attack, we like to think of our fear as our desire to maintain neighborly peace.

It's our resistance to knowledge of this fear that slams the door in Billy's face. For his behavior has impressively dramatized his parents' deficiences to us.

Standing on our doorstep, he is the living embodiment of his parents, and since we don't dare show our rage at them lest they hurt our own sensitive feelings, we take it out on the child.

We slam the door on what we do not want to know about ourselves. A victim ourselves of Billy's parents, we are violent and rude to our fellow-victim.

Do You Remember

By SOPHIE MILLER

I had an interesting telephone conversation with Mrs. Herdman of 35 Snyder avenue. On Jan. 21 she celebrated her 85th birthday. It was such a pleasure talking to her that I called her back for her youthful point of view on events of the past and of the present. She is near where the new New York state thruway on Hurley avenue is being built. Her reason for calling me was that she read about my mention of the Hunt Circus family in a recent column. She says she remembers when Charles Hunt used to tight rope walk in back of what used to be Mullen's Tobacco Company on North Front street. It seems it was when Mrs. Herdman was 14 or 15 years old that she watched Charlie in his tight rope stunts. She knows Hattie Hunt who married George Darling, who was a cigar manufacturer. Mr. Hunt must have had his mind really set from way back to get in the circus business and he did and made a success of it. Every time they come to town something is said about their former Kingston days. I wonder if this generation will send out as much talent and clever men and women to make a national mark for themselves. Only time can tell that.

Someone showed me an item from a Kingston Weekly Freeman and Journal of Thursday, March 28, 1896 on a good cat story. It seems an uptown businessman had two very handsome cats for whom he had to find good homes as he was closing up his house. One he sent to Catskill to a friend of his, another went to another good home across the Hudson river. About a year later he decided to open up his home again and live in it. While he was standing in the rear part of the yard and looking over his house for possible minor repairs he felt someone rub up against him and purr. Looking down to his astonishment he found it was one of his handsome cats, and a short distance away, seated on a fence post, was its mate, whimpering and looking at him as though very glad to see him. They both acted as though they had never left the place. How they ever came back home, of course, he never found out. The one from Catskill must have walked home, but how did the other cat get across the river if not by ferryboat, and how did they know their way to Kingston.

I remember one cat story I witnessed. One of my friends had a cat which fell ill, and although she did what she could for it, it did not get any better. She had a friend, a farmer, who lived some 20 miles or more away, and she asked that he take the cat and let it go somewhere in a field, as maybe she needed some sort of grass or weed and would find it and get better. Several weeks went by and we all completely forgot about the cat and the farmer. Then one day, up shows the cat, happy and healthy. She had come back that distance and in perfect health. Another family spent one summer in the country and there became very attached to a cat. When the fall came, they wanted to take the cat back to Kingston. It was a 30 mile ride by car. The cat had never ridden in a car, and the 30 miles was more than she could stand. They think she either died from fright or heart attack. Some cats love to ride, others are frightened of the motor noise, it all depends on what they get used to, little by little.

Sometimes Impossible

Oklahoma City, Jan. 26 (AP)—Being an officer and a gentleman is impossible at times, according to Policeman T. McMullen. "I had to use my blackjack," he sighed.

Mrs. Drewes Honored By VFW Blood Bank

Saugerties, Jan. 26—The Ladies' Auxiliary of Saugerties Memorial Post, 5034, VFW, honored Mrs. John E. Drewes, organizer and first chairman of the VFW Blood Bank last Thursday evening at the monthly Blood Bank drawing and on the occasion of the bank's second anniversary. Mrs. Drewes for her outstanding achievement as chairman was presented with a distinguished bronze plaque inscribed, Presented To Hazel Drewes for Distinguished Service on the Blood Bank by VFW Post 5034 Ladies Auxiliary January 1954.

At this celebration Mrs. Drewes resigned from her position as chairman of the Blood Bank, necessitated by her appointment as VAVS representative at Castle Point Hospital effective Jan. 1, 1954. When Mrs. Drewes confirmed her appointment as hospital representative last week she made known that it would be necessary for her to resign. At that time Mrs. Helen Arold, president of the auxiliary disclosed that the new VFW Blood Bank chairman would be Mrs. Philip Breithaupt.

Mrs. Drewes organized the Blood Bank in January, 1952, and her records show that 600 pints of blood have been donated to the bank in the two-year period. Of this, 590 pints have been used by 125 residents of this area without charge.

Miss Mary Wiseman, RN, from the Kingston City Laboratory addressed the group briefly and stated that the Saugerties VFW Blood Bank was still the "model bank" in Ulster county. She further stated that the Saugerties unit still held the record of having the largest intake and output of blood. Among guests present were Mrs. Kay Linden of Saugerties and Robert Herb of Malden who were given recognition for having donated seven times to the local blood bank in the past two years. They were presented with portfolios by the committee. Other guests present were Cdr. Leroy Lewis of the local post, Mrs. Helen Arold, auxiliary president, Charles Arold, Sr., president of the Dads of the VFW, and Mrs. Philip Breithaupt, newly appointed chairman of the Blood Bank.

Honorable mention was given to those who donated blood five times during the two-year period. They included Joseph Vozdik, Mrs. Annetta Maryon, Mrs. Margaret Angelo, David Hutton and Robert Hommell. The committee again extended its gratitude to Basil Kane, plant manager of the Ferroxcube Corp. in Saugerties, for his service in organizing the 45 donors who attended the October drawing which set a new record.

The refreshment committee headed by Mrs. John Prendergast served dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Glenford Genthner donated an appropriate party cake which was decorated to commemorate the second anniversary of the VFW Blood Bank.

Those who donated blood at this drawing included Mrs. Shirley Hitchcock, Joseph Vozdik, Mrs. Beatrice Commerford, John Noble, Mrs. Eva Russell, Walter Linden, Basil Kane, Mrs. Marie Genthner, Glenford Genthner, Margaret Angelo and Maude Mills.

Mrs. Drewes extended her thanks to all the donors, merchants, the press and all who have helped to make the Blood Bank a community service.

Do You Remember

By SOPHIE MILLER

I had an interesting telephone conversation with Mrs. Herdman of 35 Snyder avenue. On Jan. 21 she celebrated her 85th birthday. It was such a pleasure talking to her that I called her back for her youthful point of view on events of the past and of the present. She is near where the new New York state thruway on Hurley avenue is being built. Her reason for calling me was that she read about my mention of the Hunt Circus family in a recent column. She says she remembers when Charles Hunt used to tight rope walk in back of what used to be Mullen's Tobacco Company on North Front street. It seems it was when Mrs. Herdman was 14 or 15 years old that she watched Charlie in his tight rope stunts. She knows Hattie Hunt who married George Darling, who was a cigar manufacturer. Mr. Hunt must have had his mind really set from way back to get in the circus business and he did and made a success of it. Every time they come to town something is said about their former Kingston days. I wonder if this generation will send out as much talent and clever men and women to make a national mark for themselves. Only time can tell that.

Someone showed me an item from a Kingston Weekly Freeman and Journal of Thursday, March 28, 1896 on a good cat story. It seems an uptown businessman had two very handsome cats for whom he had to find good homes as he was closing up his house. One he sent to Catskill to a friend of his, another went to another good home across the Hudson river. About a year later he decided to open up his home again and live in it. While he was standing in the rear part of the yard and looking over his house for possible minor repairs he felt someone rub up against him and purr. Looking down to his astonishment he found it was one of his handsome cats, and a short distance away, seated on a fence post, was its mate, whimpering and looking at him as though very glad to see him. They both acted as though they had never left the place. How they ever came back home, of course, he never found out. The one from Catskill must have walked home, but how did the other cat get across the river if not by ferryboat, and how did they know their way to Kingston.

I remember one cat story I witnessed. One of my friends had a cat which fell ill, and although she did what she could for it, it did not get any better. She had a friend, a farmer, who lived some 20 miles or more away, and she asked that he take the cat and let it go somewhere in a field, as maybe she needed some sort of grass or weed and would find it and get better. Several weeks went by and we all completely forgot about the cat and the farmer. Then one day, up shows the cat, happy and healthy. She had come back that distance and in perfect health. Another family spent one summer in the country and there became very attached to a cat. When the fall came, they wanted to take the cat back to Kingston. It was a 30 mile ride by car. The cat had never ridden in a car, and the 30 miles was more than she could stand. They think she either died from fright or heart attack. Some cats love to ride, others are frightened of the motor noise, it all depends on what they get used to, little by little.

LET HUSBAND TELL HIM

A very unhappy situation is described in the following letter: "My husband's brother, who is living with us at the present time, causes me a great deal of embarrassment by monopolizing the conversation whenever we have guests. Not only that, but the subjects he chooses to talk about are of absolutely no interest to anyone. He will interrupt a conversation between others without the slightest hesitation, and the fact that this is resented is quite obvious. As a matter of fact, our friends are beginning to turn down invitations to come to our house and I am sure it is because of him. I'm writing to you in the hope that you can help me with this problem."

I think a frank talk between your husband and his brother is the only solution. It is not a very pleasant task, I know, but I see no help for it.

Follow Your Own Impulse

Dear Mrs. Post: My mother who lived in another country has just died. I am married and living here in the United States, and none of the people I see now, knew my mother. Under such circumstances, what would you suggest that I do about wearing mourning?

Answer: If it will give you comfort to wear black, do so by all means. On the other hand, if it will distress you to repeatedly reply to the tactless who ask for whom you are in mourning, it will be best to continue wearing the clothes you now do.

Is Spoon Necessary?

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it proper to take lump sugar (I mean in a private house where each piece is not wrapped the way it usually is in a restaurant) with the fingers, or if there are no sugar tongs, must one use a spoon or whatever other clean implement is handy?

Answer: When helping yourself to sugar, you use your fingers, of course, but when you are putting sugar into a cup for someone else, you should use a teaspoon when there are no tongs.

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 27 (AP)—Police throughout New England and New York state were alerted today for two men who used sawed-off shotguns yesterday to rob a branch of the Union Trust Co. of $61,000.

He said he, five bank employes, four customers and a small boy were barricaded in a small rear room before the men fled, presumably in an automobile.

Collins said both men wore army-style fatigue clothes and baseball caps. One was described as about 28 and the other as about 20 with a pock-marked face.

udge Says Some irms Use Union Velfare as Racket

New York, Jan. 27 (AP) — A dge, sentencing an insurance vner to 30 days in the work- use, says he thinks some insur- ce firms and brokers have a eritable racket" in writing un- n welfare insurance.

General Sessions Judge Saul S. reit gave the jail term yester- y to John DeFeo, 25, partner in e Cardinal Insurance Agency, r contempt in refusing to an- er grand jury questions con- rning alleged kickbacks on the surance.

Streit suggested "that the emiums charged to labor for is type of insurance are extra- dinarily high, that benefits to ion members are exceedingly w and that these tremendous es and profits are the contrib- ing factors to this union-wel- re fund racket."

The judge said that in 1952 the ardinal Agency had been respon- ble for more than a million dol- rs in premiums received by rious insurance companies. reit noted that in the same year e agency received $103,000 in mmissions and $190,000 in "service charges" from the Eastern Casualty Co.

Under Investigation

Asst. Dist. Attorney Alfred J. Scotti said Eastern was under investigation as well as the Cardinal Agency. He said the service charges were kickbacks and added, "we want to know who got them."

Scotti said DeFeo had refused to answer grand jury questions on what happened to the money.

DeFeo's attorney, Harris Steinberg, claimed DeFeo did nothing illegal and "did not answer (jury questions) because he just could not remember."

The attorney said he would appeal the 30-day sentence.

DeFeo was paroled in custody of Steinberg until Friday, when he is to start serving the sentence.

Scotti said the Eastern firm had as one of its clients the Alcor Agency. This was the insurance agency with which Thomas F. Lewis was associated. Lewis, president of Local 32-E of the AFL Building Service Employes International Union, was murdered last summer.

Bills in Legislature

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—Compulsory fluoridation of water supplies has been proposed by a Brooklyn assemblyman.

Ben Werbel, a Democrat, introducted a bill yesterday that would empower the State Conservation Commissioner to order fluoridation of "existing and future public waters supply and water storage reservoirs furnishing water for human consumption."

The action would follow consultation with the state health commissioner and "recognized medical and dental authorities," the bill says.

Introduction of a fluorine compound into drinking water is supposed to reduce tooth decay.

Under the public health law, communities may fluoridate their water supplies under conditions approved by the State Health Commission.

Restricting wire-tap evidence to cases involving treason, spying or sabotage was proposed by Sen. John J. Donovan, Jr., Manhattan Democrat.

The state constitution prohibits "unreasonable interception of telephone and telegraph communications." Donovan's measure would outlaw the use of intercepted evidence of any crimes except treason, sabotage or espionage.

Another measure would provide that any restriction on employment of minors after school and males between 16 and 18 shall not prevent employment of boys for delivery of newspapers. It was introduced by Assemblyman Felipe N. Torres-D, the Bronx.

Kiwanis Presents Entertainment at County Hospital

The Kiwanis Club with the cooperation of a group from the King's Chorus and students of the Cashin School of Dance on Tuesday night sponsored an entertainment for patients at the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital.

At Monday night's program, John E. Jordan was master of ceremonies. Entertainment numbers included acrobatic dances by Betty Bunce and Kathleen Mehm and a vocal solo by Charles Tiano, all students of the Cashin School; solos by Kiwanians Jordan, Thomas Dendy, and Raymond Myers; trumpet solo by George Silkworth; a number by Chris and Mary Morris, and magic by Fred Van Deusen.

As the finale, a series of numbers was rendered by a group from the King's Chorus under the direction of Ronald R. Romme. Members of the group were June Crosby, Mary Lou Baffa, Margaret Danford, Mary Jo Haulenbeek, Raymond Myers, Henry Page, William Lahl and John Hill.

Refreshments were served after the entertainment. Jack Feye was chairman of the committee in charge, and Harry Maisenhelder provided piano accompaniment.

Republican leaders in New York city say retirements are expected to create as many as seven vacancies here within the year and that the first of these should be filled by active party workers such as Minitzer and Sylvester.

He Should, but—

They believe Ives should have the right to name at least one of the forthcoming judges but only after party stalwarts have been rewarded.

GOP circles here said Ives went directly to the White House, over the heads of state and city party leaders, to recommend Bicks. They said local leaders did not know of the potential appointment until they were approached by FBI agents making a routine check of Bick's background.

In Albany, Dewey's office said he would have no comment on an appointment not to be made by him.

It is estimated that the state spends approximately $10,000 a bed in building a mental hospital. At that rate the 350 million dollars would provide space for 35,000 mental patients. There are now 112,000 persons in state mental institutions.

The Senate put off until next week action on another Dewey proposal for a 200-million-dollar bond issue for low-rent housing and slum clearance projects.

The measure, already passed by the Assembly, will be pushed easily through the Senate.

The Senate also postponed action on a measure to establish a "czar" with full power to govern all phases of the scandal-ridden harness racing industry. That administration bill also will slide speedily through the Legislature.

In other actions yesterday:

1. Both houes voted to continue until Feb 15, 1955, the temporary state commission studying the fiscal operations of the state and municipalities. Dewey is expected to sign it.

2. The Senate approved two bills to alter the election law.

One would permit election inspectors and registration boards to change a voter's registration district when he had signed up in the wrong one.

The other prescribes methods of removing from the voting register, in communities of less than 5,000, the names of those who have failed to vote regularly. Voters in such communities are not required to register yearly.

During a fire in the night, the tenants of an apartment hotel rushed into the street carrying their most prized possessions. One woman noticed that the gentleman who lived directly above her was carrying a large, covered bird cage.

Woman—What have you there?

Man—That's my pet rooster.

The woman gasped and fainted. When she was revived she told her anxious neighbor:

Woman—I'm sorry I fainted, but you see, I've been under treatment by a psychiatrist for the past year because I kept hearing a rooster crowing!

Village Rest Upsets Rapp's Express, 54-52

Ferraro's Clutch Shooting Wins Game

Village Rest shaded Rapp's Express, 54-52, after trailing by a point going into the stretch quarter, as the YMCA "B" League launched its second half last night.

It was Don Ferraro's brilliant shooting in the last two minutes that cinched the game for the Villagers, who withstood a 30-point assault by Bob Kozlowski. Ferraro racked up 23.

In the companion piece, Chris Rienzo sparkled with 29 points as Greco Brothers played a strong fourth period to whip the Angel Juniors, 66-60.

Ferraro Excels

Ferraro staged a Bob Cousy exhibition for the underdog Villagers. With his team trailing by two points, he tied the score with a running jump shot from the foul circle. He was fouled a few seconds later and made good both of his free throws.

Village Rest then got possession and Ferraro ran out the clock with a superb dribbling exhibition. The Villagers led 28-26 at the halfway mark.

Phil McCloskey tallied 15 points for the Expressmen and Jack Beaver hit the same total for the Villagers.

After leading 22-11 at the quarter and 33-24 at the half, Greco Brothers fell behind 46-40 when the Angels outscored them 22-7 in the third period. Rienzo, Mike Tiano and Big Sal Misasi then sparked a 26-point spree that had the winners going away at the finish.

Misasi rimmed 16 points and Mike Tiano had 13.

Bill Fitzgerald's 18 points paced the Angels, with Ed Lindhurst firing 15 and Don Schroder 12.

High School Plays Tough Monticello Five Tonight In Field House Contest

Undefeated Kingston High faces a dangerous Monticello quintet in the final game of the DUSO's first round tonight at the Kate Walton field house at 8 o'clock.

The Maroons are confident, but wary, as they go in quest of their ninth straight victory, eight in a row in the conference.

Monticello's record is 4 wins and 3 losses but the mountaineers have three sharp operators in Mendy Ringle, Marty Schwartz and Ronnie Trachtenberg.

Two of the Monticello losses were by close margins and they gave Poughkeepsie its hardest fight to date on the Birdge City boards.

Coach G. Warren Kias is expected to go with the new lineup that features Bob Bondar at guard.

The tentative lineups:

Harrison, eighth-ranking contender for Marciano's crown, dropped Walls, ranked fifth, for counts of nine in the fourth and sixth rounds last night and went on to take a unanimous 10-round decision.

One of the Los Angeles heavyweight's handlers said Harrison was going to New York for a 10-day vacation and Friday will issue a challenge to Marciano.

"He beat me, that's all," said the Canadian champion who as the 2 to 1 favorite outweighed Harrison 190½ to 183 pounds.

McDougald Joins Whitey Ford In Yankees' Holdout Camp

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—Casey Stengel, a wizard of the diamond, joins the high brass of the New York Yankees at the conference table today as the world champions step up their efforts to sign their players.

Stengel is coming to town officially to attend the New York Baseball Writers' dinner Sunday night. But he has been known to take a welcome hand in adjusting salary differences with his star performers.

So far the Yanks have signed only catcher Yogi Berra from their 1953 regulars. They inherited a two-year contract when they got Eddie Robinson from the Philadelphia Athletics and have agreed to terms with pitcher Harry Byrd, the other big name in the wholesale swap with Philadelphia.

Tom Gorman, a relief man last season, and two outfield prospects, Art Schult and Emil Tellinger, came into the fold yesterday but third baseman Gil McDougald left the Yankee office unsigned after a conference.

McDougald said he needed time to think over the Yanks' offer and the management hurriedly called the session a "preliminary conference."

Giants Sign Irvin

The Giants came up with Monte Irvin, their slugging outfielder, and the Dodgers signed Carl Furillo, the National League batting champion.

Irwin's salary was reported to be about $25,000 while Furillo got a raise of $5,000 to around $27,500.

Murry Dickson, the veteran righthander the Philadelphia Phils bought from Pittsburgh, returned a signed contract to his new owners who were understood to have offered him $20,000.

The Cincinnati Redlegs found a trio of satisfied pitchers including Saul Rogovin who was obtained in a trade from the Chicago White Sox. The others were Art Flowers and Lefty Harry Perkowski.

The Baltimore Orioles gave ageless Satchel Paige his outright release. They figured the colorful pitcher was a shade too old to fit in the Orioles' new youth movement. Conservative estimates figure Paige, who drew $25,000 when the Orioles were the St. Louis Browns, is at least 49 years old.

The St. Louis Cardinals bought and signed their first Negro player— first baseman Thomas E. Alston from San Diego of the Pacific Coast League. They paid $100,000 in cash and four players including pitcher Ed Erautt and first baseman Dick Sisler.

Mario Picone, pitching hopeful for the Giants, works as a stevedore during the off-season.

Judge Says Some Firms Use Union Welfare as Racket

New York, Jan. 27 (AP) — A dge, sentencing an insurance vner to 30 days in the work- use, says he thinks some insur- ce firms and brokers have a eritable racket" in writing un- welfare insurance.

General Sessions Judge Saul S. reit gave the jail term yester- y to John DeFeo, 25, partner in e Cardinal Insurance Agency, r contempt in refusing to an- er grand jury questions con- rning alleged kickbacks on the surance.

Streit suggested "that the emiums charged to labor for is type of insurance are extra- dinarily high, that benefits to nion members are exceedingly w and that these tremendous es and profits are the contrib- ing factors to this union-wel- re fund racket."

The judge said that in 1952 the ardinal Agency had been respon- ble for more than a million dol- rs in premiums received by rious insurance companies. reit noted that in the same year e agency received $103,000 in mmissions and $190,000 in "service charges" from the East- ern Casualty Co.

Under Investigation

Asst. Dist. Attorney Alfred J. Scotti said Eastern was under in- vestigation as well as the Cardinal Agency. He said the service charges were kickbacks and add- ed, "we want to know who got them."

Scotti said DeFeo had refused to answer grand jury questions on what happened to the money.

DeFeo's attorney, Harris Stein- berg, claimed DeFeo did nothing illegal and "did not answer (jury questions) because he just could not remember."

The attorney said he would ap- peal the 30-day sentence.

DeFeo was paroled in custody of Steinberg until Friday, when he is to start serving the sentence.

Scotti said the Eastern firm had as one of its clients the Alcor Agency. This was the insurance agency with which Thomas F. Lewis was associated. Lewis, president of Local 32-E of the AFL Building Service Employes International Union, was mur- dered last summer.

Bills in Legislature

Albany, Jan. 27 (AP)—Compul- sory fluoridation of water supplies has been proposed by a Brooklyn assemblyman.

Ben Werbel, a Democrat, intro- ducted a bill yesterday that would empower the State Conservation Commissioner to order fluoridation of "existing and future public waters supply and water storage reservoirs furnishing water for human consumption."

The action would follow consul- tation with the state health com- missioner and "recognized medical and dental authorities," the bill says.

Introduction of a fluorine com- pound into drinking water is sup- posed to reduce tooth decay.

Under the public health law, communities may fluoridate their water supplies under conditions approved by the State Health Commission.

Restricting wire-tap evidence to cases involving treason, spying or sabotage was proposed by Sen. John J. Donovan, Jr., Manhattan Democrat.

The state constitution prohibits "unreasonable interception of telephone and telegraph communi- cations." Donovan's measure would outlaw the use of inter- cepted evidence of any crimes ex- cept treason, sabotage or espion- age.

Another measure would provide that any restriction on employ- ment of minors after school and males between 16 and 18 shall not prevent employment of boys for delivery of newspapers. It was introduced by Assemblyman Fe- lipe N. Torres-D, the Bronx.

To Meet Socially

Berlin, Jan. 27 (AP)—Despite all his harsh words about the United States, Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov isn't going to deny U. S. Secretary of State Dulles his turn to the caviar and vodka. American officials disclosed today that Molotov has invited Dulles to dine with him Friday night at the Russian embassy in East Berlin. Dulles will return the courtesy next week, they added. French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault was Molotov's dinner guest last night, while the Ameri- can secretary was host to British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden. Eden entertains Molotov tonight.

Kiwanis Presents Entertainment at County Hospital

The Kiwanis Club with the co- operation of a group from the King's Chorus and students of the Cashin School of Dance on Tues- day night sponsored an entertain- ment for patients at the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital.

The party was one in the series of monthly events given by va- rious civic organizations and ar- ranged by the Patients Service Committee of the Ulster County Tuberculosis and Health Associa- tion.

At Monday night's program, John E. Jordan was master of ceremonies. Entertainment num- bers included acrobatic dances by Betty Bunce and Kathleen Mehm and a vocal solo by Charles Tiano, all students of the Cashin School; solos by Kiwanians Jordan, Thomas Dendy, and Raymond Myers; trumpet solo by George Silkworth; a number by Chris and Mary Morris, and magic by Fred Van Deusen.

As the finale, a series of num- bers was rendered by a group from the King's Chorus under the direction of Ronald R. Romme. Members of the group were June Crosby, Mary Lou Baffa, Margaret Danford, Mary Jo Haulenbeek, Raymond Myers, Henry Page, William Lahl and John Hill.

Refreshments were served after the entertainment. Jack Feye was chairman of the committee in charge, and Harry Maisenhelder provided piano accompaniment.

Dewey and Ives

ter was campaign manager for Rep. Henry J. Latham when the latter ran for City Council presi- dent in 1951.

Republican leaders in New York city say retirements are ex- pected to create as many as seven vacancies here within the year and that the first of these should be filled by active party workers such as Minitzer and Sylvester.

He Should, but—

They believe Ives should have the right to name at least one of the forthcoming judges but only after party stalwarts have been rewarded.

GOP circles here said Ives went directly to the White House, over the heads of state and city party leaders, to recommend Bicks. They said local leaders did not know of the potential appointment until they were approached by FBI agents making a routine check of Bick's background.

In Albany, Dewey's office said he would have no comment on an appointment not to be made by him.

It is estimated that the state spends approximately $10,000 a bed in building a mental hospital. At that rate the 350 million dol- lars would provide space for 35,- 000 mental patients. There are now 112,000 persons in state men- tal institutions.

The Senate put off until next week action on another Dewey proposal for a 200-million-dollar bond issue for low-rent housing and slum clearance projects.

The measure, already passed by the Assembly, will be pushed easily through the Senate.

The Senate also postponed ac- tion on a measure to establish a "czar" with full power to govern all phases of the scandal-ridden harness racing industry. That ad- ministration bill also will slide speedily through the Legislature.

In other actions yesterday:

1. Both houes voted to continue until Feb 15, 1955, the temporary state commission studying the fiscal operations of the state and municipalities. Dewey is expected to sign it.

2. The Senate approved two bills to alter the election law.

One would permit election in- spectors and registration boards to change a voter's registration district when he had signed up in the wrong one.

The other prescribes methods of removing from the voting register, in communities of less than 5,000, the names of those who have failed to vote regularly. Voters in such communities are not required to register yearly.

"THE FRIENDLY HOME OF THRIFT"

Short, Unorthodox Oklahoma City Star, Defies Gravity to Become High Scorer

By FRANK A. GODSOE
(NEA Staff Writer)

Oklahoma City University is a bristling little culture foundry of 2500 students. It's no task to inventory its athletic assets. They consist of a baseball team which is fed by no athletic scholarships and the nation's eighth-ranked college basketball team.

And they also have a fellow by the name of Arnold Short, who recently established a new national collegiate free throw record, sinking 23 out of 25 attempts against Baylor.

He then came back to sear the University of Houston with a 41-point total. And it wasn't any short spurt which put Short in the middle of the nation's scoring picture. Named by Coach Eddie Hickey of St. Louis as a "constant threat" in an NEA series at the season's outset, Short broke Bob Kurland's scoring record in the All-College tournament held annually in Oklahoma City with a 75-point effort last season.

Has 30-Plus Average

Holding a 30-plus scoring average this year, Short is a slight built guy with close-cropped hair. He has a small head and were it not for an oversized nose, he could pull off a shirt without unbuttoning the collar.

He has legs like bent spaghetti and a rumbleseat modeled after a cracker.

That may really not be a nose, maybe it's a camouflaged Norden bomb sight. When he flings the ball all it knows to do is go in. Against Houston, his 18-point scoring burst in the first 10 minutes of the game left the Texan quintet so dazed they neglected several little things such as an innovation quite popular with some teams—the rebound.

Some Say He's Best

Doyle Parrack, youthful 32-year-old coach of the OCU team, comments quietly that Short is "the best I've ever seen."

And how did Short arrive at Oklahoma City?

"Oh," said Parrack, "he was a good shooter on a weak prep team. His coach wrote us after he visited U of Oklahoma and didn't create a stir. He visited us and we took him."

What the Chiefs took was a boy who can shoot from anywhere on a basketball court. Nearly always, he throws the ball while off balance. But a field goal counts two points.

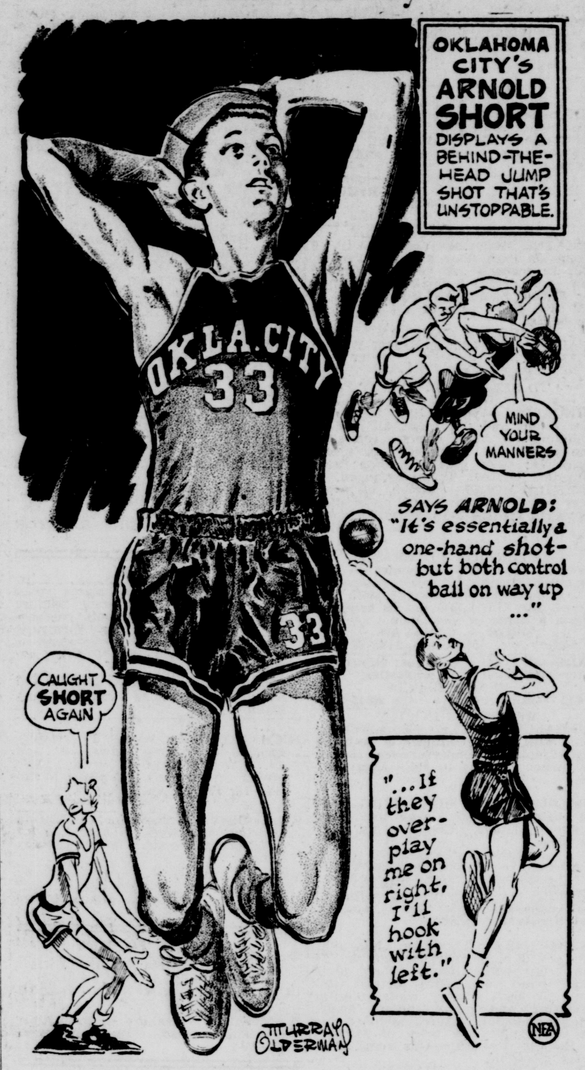

Short can hook with either hand and has a good one-hander from outside. He is able to bat in two or three rebounds a game.

His real crowd shocker, however, is a jump shot while falling away from the basket. He seems simply to sling it while falling backward. Fundamentally, a shooter should be moving toward the basket and follow his body.

Ted Williams was the only Red Sox player to hit a homer at Washington's Griffith Stadium in 1953.

Gene Littler To Join Pros

Palm Springs, Calif., Jan. 27 (AP)—National Amateur golf champion Gene Littler has decided to cast his lot with the professionals and will play for the Thunderbird Country Club the rest of the season in the pro ranks.

Littler announced his decision last night. He is being formally released from the Navy Feb. 2 under a medical discharge because of recurring attacks of hay fever. He has been in the service over three years.

Littler, 23, of San Diego, never took a formal golf lesson. His 274 in the San Diego Open was 14 under par and four under the leading pro in the tourney, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison.

Moore's Wife To Attach Purse In Maxim Bout

Miami, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP)—Moody, tight-lipped Archie Moore, although heavily beset by marital troubles, is a 2-1 favorite to defend his light heavyweight championship successfully against jabbing Joey Maxim tonight in their 15-round outdoor fight in Miami Stadium.

Archie's wife, Alice, dealt the champ a legal blow that hurt him worse than anything the light-punching Maxim can throw when she filed a separate maintenance suit yesterday that tied up his purse and will keep Archie in Florida until a settlement is reached.

If predictions of a $100,000 gate hold up, Moore's share will be in the neighborhood of $52,000. He is to receive 40 per cent and Maxim 20 per cent of the net pot, which will be sweetened by $50,000 in television and radio receipts.

Moore Reported Edgy

Moore had been quiet and edgy even before his wife brought the legal action, possibly because of difficulty in making the 175-pound weight limit. During a strenuous two-week training program, he wore either heavy woolens or a plastic suit in the ring.

Archie, oldest of today's champions, has had no weight trouble before. He scaled 172½ pounds when he lifted the title from Maxim in St. Louis Dec. 17, 1952, and 173¾ when he defended it against Maxim in their return match in Ogden, Utah, last June 24.

Tonight's fight will be broadcast and telecast nationally by CBS starting at 10 p. m. (EST).

SPORTS

By Charles J. Tiano

First harbinger of still distant spring:

Jim Freligh of Saugerties envisions a six-team semi-pro baseball league operating in the north Ulster-Greene county area this year.

"Two other teams will be named later," he says, with obvious optimism.

Maybe Fred Davi could be induced to join the circuit, if the proposed Hudson Valley League doesn't materialize.

Ordinarily, meetings would be under way to organize the league that William D. Ryan has expressed devout wishes for in the past. Unless, of course, Poughkeepsie's unexpected victory in the 1953 round-robin has dampened the Newburgher's enthusiasm for the 1954 circuit.

If it has, there is the inescapable conclusion that the Sen. Thomas C. Desmond Trophy, which went to Poughkeepsie, is a heap of crockery to lavish on a one-year circuit. And only a round-robin at that. If only to maintain the respect of the elder statesman from the Hill City, it would seem obligatory on Ryan's part to make a move toward the proposed Hudson Valley League.

We think Davi will line up with Freligh's league if there is indefinite silence from the south. His natural orbit is the Newburgh-Poughkeepsie - Kingston (and others) league but he will settle for the Ulster-Greene circuit. The Glasco promoter already has applied for use of the stadium and is still serious about his baseball.

Gill . . . The Wounded

His sports page headline the next day was the essence of naivete: "NFA Limits Kingston to 56-54 Victory." For some cockeyed reason, our Hill City colleague had established the Maroons a "15-point" favorite over the four-time DUSO basketball champions.

Friend Gill's logic is hard to follow, but if he insists on making his own private book on DUSO games, that's certainly his perrogative as a sports expert. But if "Bo" could name any other DUSO observer willing to take Kingston and give 15 points, we'd like to see this new Pittsburgh O'Brien.

Gill doesn't cotton to some expert opinion that Kingston's Skip Brodhead might possibly be the best ball player in the DUSO League. Since he has Mickey Burkoski and Harold Kaplan as Exhibits A and B for the All-DUSO, "Bo" might understandably be constrained from joining the Brodhead bandwagon. His rating of Kaplan as "the Bob Cousy of the DUSO League" is a natural evaluation of a home town sports writer for a hometown favorite. Kaplan is good, but we'll take Brodhead. When Newburgh's "Cousy" was limited to 3 points in the clutch game with Poughkeepsie, the Hill City scribe barely mentioned the fact.

Against the same club, when the chips were down, Brodhead played a tremendous game. While his strength lasted, he was the dominant player in the first half against NFA.

These comments point up the fact that selecting the 1953-54 All-DUSO will not be an easy assignment. Who, in all fairness can choose among Mickey Burkoskie, Bill Williams of Middletown and Dick Bezemer of Kingston if they maintain their present form?

Burkoski has two years of All-DUSO rating behind him, but on what Kingston and Middletown fans have been seeing in recent weeks, it will be difficult to sell them the proposition that Mickey is the best.

"Kingston fans are like the poor fellow who inherited a fortune over night...Now that they have a new field house, they forgot they used to play in a barn!

How do you like that coming from a source where by modern standards the basketball facilities are just a shade better than a banbox and where the restraining lines seem to end in spectators' laps? How far does "Bo" go back?

Kingston played 15 years at the municipal auditorium, which was the finest floor in the DUSO League. The Kate Walton Field House is such a dazzling, modernistic layout that Messers. Gill and George Palmateer have jokingly remarked the opposition is dazzled by the lighting effects only.

Reunion Held For Undertakers Who Crashed 3797

St. Louis, Jan. 27 (AP)—It was 17 years ago tonight that a five-man bowling team rolled world record three-game score of 3,797. The record still stands.

Four members of the team—the Hermann Undertakers of St. Louis—held a reunion to celebrate tonight's anniversary and all thought their record will continue.

Jim (Buzz) Wilson, who was low man in the record total, said "I'll say no one breaks it. Look at me. I hit 709 (a pretty fair score) and I was the low man."

Ray Holmes, tops in the series with 792, added "we gave them something to shoot at and I don't think our record will be broken."

Also present at the reunion were Fred Taff (766) and Sam Garofalo (759). Missing was Bob Wills (771), now an army colonel last reported in Korea.

Langlois Screams 'We Wuz Robbed' After Turner Loss

Philadelphia, Jan. 27 (AP)—An old familar boxing echo resounded through the arena last night as Gil Turner whipped Pierre Langlois—"we wuz robbed."

Langlois, speaking in French, English and with gestures that even a member of the fight mob could understand, sat in his dressing room decrying the unanimous 5-4-1 verdict of the officials.

"I ween,' I ween," he repeated over and over again. "He foul me six times," said Pierre and he stripped to show what he claimed was a beet-red groin. This was the 14th defeat as against 63 victories and five draws for the 157½ pound Langlois.

Jean Bretonnel, chubby manager of the monsieur from Port Audemer in Normandy, was bathed in sweat, most of it created in the hectic moments after the fight when he jumped around screaming "No, no, no," and several French versions of the "we wuz robbed" routine.

The 7,168 fans—they paid $38,639—seemed to agree with Langlois, although the ringside experts did not. The fans booed, threw paper into the ring and bounced their chairs on the stone floor. Several fights broke out in the aisles. One woman picked a fight and got slugged for her efforts.

Knicks, Syracuse Gear for Series

(By The Associated Press)

The New York Knickerbockers and the Syracuse Nationals tangle in a three-game series, starting tomorrow, that could very well decide the Eastern division title in the National Basketball Association.

The Knicks meet the Nationals at Syracuse on Thursday night. The teams play in New York on Saturday and return to Syracuse for the third game of the series on Sunday.

In other games last night, the Western division leaders, the Minneapolis Lakers, defeated the Milwaukee Hawks 84-69, and the Boston Celtics turned back the Baltimore Bullets 94-69.

Village Rest Upsets Rapp's Express, 54-52

Ferraro's Clutch Shooting Wins Game

Village Rest shaded Rapp's Express, 54-52, after trailing by a point going into the stretch quarter, as the YMCA "B" League launched its second half last night.

It was Don Ferraro's brilliant shooting in the last two minutes that cinched the game for the Villagers, who withstood a 30-point assault by Bob Kozlowski. Ferraro racked up 23.

In the companion piece, Chris Rienzo sparkled with 29 points as Greco Brothers played a strong fourth period to whip the Angel Juniors, 66-60.

Ferraro Excels

Ferraro staged a Bob Cousy exhibition for the underdog Villagers. With his team trailing by two points, he tied the score with a running jump shot from the foul circle. He was fouled a few seconds later and made good both of his free throws.

Village Rest then got possession and Ferraro ran out the clock with a superb dribbling exhibition. The Villagers led 28-26 at the halfway mark.

Phil McCloskey tallied 15 points for the Expressmen and Jack Beaver hit the same total for the Villagers.

After leading 22-11 at the quarter and 33-24 at the half, Greco Brothers fell behind 46-40 when the Angels outscored them 22-7 in the third period. Rienzo, Mike Tiano and Big Sal Misasi then sparked a 26-point spree that had the winners going away at the finish.

Misasi rimmed 16 points and Mike Tiano had 13.

High School Plays Tough Monticello Five Tonight In Field House Contest

Undefeated Kingston High faces a dangerous Monticello quintet in the final game of the DUSO's first round tonight at the Kate Walton field house at 8 o'clock.

The Maroons are confident, but wary, as they go in quest of their ninth straight victory, eight in a row in the conference.

Monticello's record is 4 wins and 3 losses but the mountaineers have three sharp operators in Mendy Ringle, Marty Schwartz and Ronnie Trachtenberg.

Two of the Monticello losses were by close margins and they gave Poughkeepsie its hardest fight to date on the Birdge City boards.

Coach G. Warren Kias is expected to go with the new lineup that features Bob Bondar at guard.

KINGSTON		MONTICELLO
Skip Brodhead	Forward	Mendy Ringle
John Godwin	Forward	Marty Schwartz
Dick Bezemer	Center	Harold Sturges
Bill Haber	Guard	Ron Trachtenberg
Bob Bondar	Guard	Ivan Zubrow

Officials: Buck Gros, Pat Knight.

Harrison, eighth-ranking contender for Marciano's crown, dropped Walls, ranked fifth, for counts of nine in the fourth and sixth rounds last night and went on to take a unanimous 10-round decision.

One of the Los Angeles heavyweight's handlers said Harrison was going to New York for a 10-day vacation and Friday will issue a challenge to Marciano.

"He beat me, that's all," said the Canadian champion who as the 2 to 1 favorite outweighed Harrison 190½ to 183 pounds.

McDougald Joins Whitey Ford In Yankees' Holdout Camp

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—Casey Stengel, a wizard of the diamond, joins the high brass of the New York Yankees at the conference table today as the world champions step up their efforts to sign their players.

Stengel is coming to town officially to attend the New York Baseball Writers' dinner Sunday night. But he has been known to take a welcome hand in adjusting salary differences with his star performers.

So far the Yanks have signed only catcher Yogi Berra from their 1953 regulars. They inherited a two-year contract when they got Eddie Robinson from the Philadelphia Athletics and have agreed to terms with pitcher Harry Byrd, the other big name in the wholesale swap with Philadelphia.

Tom Gorman, a relief man last season, and two outfield prospects, Art Schult and Emil Tellinger, came into the fold yesterday but third baseman Gil McDougald left the Yankee office unsigned after a conference.

McDougald said he needed time to think over the Yanks' offer and the management hurriedly called the session a "preliminary conference."

Giants Sign Irvin

The Giants came up with Monte Irvin, their slugging outfielder, and the Dodgers signed Carl Furillo, the National League batting champion.

Irwin's salary was reported to be about $25,000 while Furillo got a raise of $5,000 to around $27,500.

Murry Dickson, the veteran righthander the Philadelphia Phils bought from Pittsburgh, returned a signed contract to his new owners who were understood to have offered him $20,000.

The Cincinnati Redlegs found a trio of satisfied pitchers including Saul Rogovin who was obtained in a trade from the Chicago White Sox. The others were Art Flowers and Lefty Harry Perkowski.

The Baltimore Orioles gave ageless Satchel Paige his outright release. They figured the colorful pitcher was a shade too old to fit in the Orioles' new youth movement. Conservative estimates figure Paige, who drew $25,000 when the Orioles were the St. Louis Browns, is at least 49 years old.

The St. Louis Cardinals bought and signed their first Negro player— first baseman Thomas E. Alston from San Diego of the Pacific Coast League. They paid $100,000 in cash and four players including pitcher Ed Erautt and first baseman Dick Sisler.

Short, Unorthodox Oklahoma City Star, Defies Gravity to Become High Scorer

By FRANK A. GODSOE
(NEA Staff Writer)

Oklahoma City University is a bristling little culture foundry of 2500 students. It's no task to inventory its athletic assets. They consist of a baseball team which is fed by no athletic scholarships and the nation's eighth-ranked college basketball team.

And they also have a fellow by the name of Arnold Short, who recently established a new national collegiate free throw record, sinking 23 out of 25 attempts against Baylor.

He then came back to sear the University of Houston with a 41-point total. And it wasn't any short spurt which put Short in the middle of the nation's scoring picture. Named by Coach Eddie Hickey of St. Louis as a "constant threat" in an NEA series at the season's outset, Short broke Bob Kurland's scoring record in the All-College tournament held annually in Oklahoma City with a 75-point effort last season.

Has 30-Plus Average

Holding a 30-plus scoring average this year, Short is a slight built guy with close-cropped hair. He has a small head and were it not for an oversized nose, he could pull off a shirt without unbuttoning the collar.

He has legs like bent spaghetti and a rumbleseat modeled after a cracker.

That may really not be a nose, maybe it's a camouflaged Norden bomb sight. When he flings the ball all it knows to do is go in. Against Houston, his 18-point scoring burst in the first 10 minutes of the game left the Texan quintet so dazed they neglected several little things such as an innovation quite popular with some teams—the rebound.

Some Say He's Best

Doyle Parrack, youthful 32-year-old coach of the OCU team, comments quietly that Short is "the best I've ever seen."

And how did Short arrive at Oklahoma City?

"Oh," said Parrack, "he was a good shooter on a weak prep team. His coach wrote us after he visited U of Oklahoma and didn't create a stir. He visited us and we took him."

What the Chiefs took was a boy who can shoot from anywhere on a basketball court. Nearly always, he throws the ball while off balance. But a field goal counts two points.

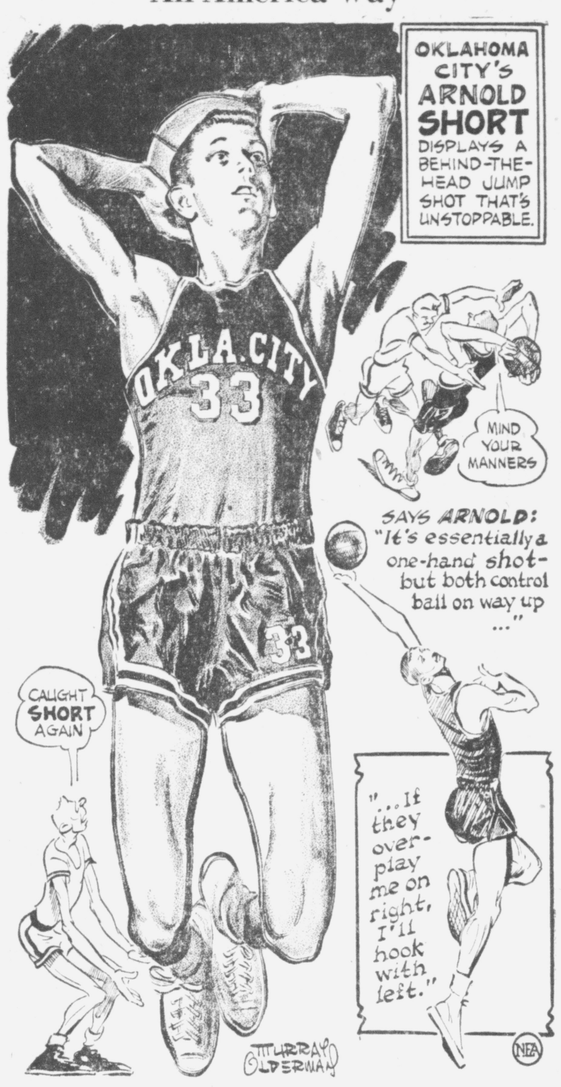

Short can hook with either hand and has a good one-hander from outside. He is able to bat in two or three rebounds a game.

His real crowd shocker, however, is a jump shot while falling away from the basket. He seems simply to sling it while falling backward. Fundamentally, a shooter should be moving toward the basket and follow his body.

Arnold Short doesn't, yet he makes an electrical scoreboard crackle like a telegraph wire.

Ted Williams was the only Red Sox player to hit a homer at Washington's Griffith Stadium in 1953.

Gene Littler To Join Pros

Palm Springs, Calif., Jan. 27 (AP)—National Amateur golf champion Gene Littler has decided to cast his lot with the professionals and will play for the Thunderbird Country Club the rest of the season in the pro ranks.

Littler announced his decision last night. He is being formally released from the Navy Feb. 2 under a medical discharge because of recurring attacks of hay fever. He has been in the service over three years.

Littler, 23, of San Diego, never took a formal golf lesson. His 274 in the San Diego Open was 14 under par and four under the leading pro in the tourney, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison.

Moore's Wife To Attach Purse In Maxim Bout

Miami, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP)—Moody, tight-lipped Archie Moore, although heavily beset by marital troubles, is a 2-1 favorite to defend his light heavyweight championship successfully against jabbing Joey Maxim tonight in their 15-round outdoor fight in Miami Stadium.

Archie's wife, Alice, dealt the champ a legal blow that hurt him worse than anything the light-punching Maxim can throw when she filed a separate maintenance suit yesterday that tied up his purse and will keep Archie in Florida until a settlement is reached.

The action was particularly painful to the 37-year-old Archie because it promises to be the richest payday of his 17-year career.

If predictions of a $100,000 gate hold up, Moore's share will be in the neighborhood of $52,000. He is to receive 40 per cent and Maxim 20 per cent of the net pot, which will be sweetened by $50,000 in television and radio receipts.

Moore Reported Edgy

Moore had been quiet and edgy even before his wife brought the legal action, possibly because of difficulty in making the 175-pound weight limit. During a strenuous two-week training program, he wore either heavy woolens or a plastic suit in the ring.

Archie, oldest of today's champions, has had no weight trouble before. He scaled 172½ pounds when he lifted the title from Maxim in St. Louis Dec. 17, 1952, and 173¾ when he defended it against Maxim in their return match in Ogden, Utah, last June 24.

Tonight's fight will be broadcast and telecast nationally by CBS starting at 10 p. m. (EST).

SPORTS

By Charles J. Tiano
Sports Editor

First harbinger of still distant spring:

Jim Freligh of Saugerties envisions a six-team semi-pro baseball league operating in the north Ulster-Greene county area this year.

The former local baseball player and umpire mentions four teams ready to go—Ravena, Catskill Colored Giants, Cementon and Saugerties.

"Two other teams will be named later," he says, with obvious optimism.

Maybe Fred Davi could be induced to join the circuit, if the proposed Hudson Valley League doesn't materialize.

Ordinarily, meetings would be under way to organize the league that William D. Ryan has expressed devout wishes for in the past. Unless, of course, Poughkeepsie's unexpected victory in the 1953 round-robin has dampened the Newburgher's enthusiasm for the 1954 circuit.

If it has, there is the inescapable conclusion that the Sen. Thomas C. Desmond Trophy, which went to Poughkeepsie, is a heap of crockery to lavish on a one-year circuit. And only a round-robin at that. If only to maintain the respect of the elder statesman from the Hill City, it would seem obligatory on Ryan's part to make a move toward the proposed Hudson Valley League.

We think Davi will line up with Freligh's league if there is indefinite silence from the south. His natural orbit is the Newburgh-Poughkeepsie - Kingston (and others) league but he will settle for the Ulster-Greene circuit. The Glasco promoter already has applied for use of the stadium and is still serious about his baseball.

Gill . . . The Wounded

His sports page headline the next day was the essence of naivete: "NFA Limits Kingston to 56-54 Victory." For some cockeyed reason, our Hill City college had established the Maroons a "15-point" favorite over the four-time DUSO basketball champions.

Friend Gill's logic is hard to follow, but if he insists on making his own private book on DUSO games, that's certainly his perrogative as a sports expert. But if "Bo" could name any other DUSO observer willing to take Kingston and give 15 points, we'd like to see this new Pittsburgh O'Brien.

Gill doesn't cotton to some expert opinion that Kingston's Skip Brodhead might possibly be the best ball player in the DUSO League. Since he has Mickey Burkoski and Harold Kaplan as Exhibits A and B for the All-DUSO, "Bo" might understandably be constrained from joining the Brodhead bandwagon. His rating of Kaplan as "the Bob Cousy of the DUSO League" is a natural evaluation of a home town sports writer for a hometown favorite. Kaplan is good, but we'll take Brodhead. When Newburgh's "Cousy" was limited to 3 points in the clutch game with Poughkeepsie, the Hill City scribe barely mentioned the fact.

Against the same club, when the chips were down, Brodhead played a tremendous game. While his strength lasted, he was the dominant player in the first half against NFA.

These comments point up the fact that selecting the 1953-54 All-DUSO will not be an easy assignment. Who, in all fairness can choose among Mickey Burkoskie, Bill Williams of Middletown and Dick Bezemer of Kingston if they maintain their present form?

Burkoski has two years of All-DUSO rating behind him, but on what Kingston and Middletown fans have been seeing in recent weeks, it will be difficult to sell them the proposition that Mickey is the best.

"Bo" took one gratuitous slap at Kingston fans that is sheer absurdity and downright amusing. He wrote:

"Kingston fans are like the poor fellow who inherited a fortune over night...Now that they have a new field house, they forgot they used to play in a barn!

How do you like that coming from a source where by modern standards the basketball facilities are just a shade better than a banbox and where the restraining lines seem to end in spectators' laps? How far does "Bo" go back?

Kingston played 15 years at the municipal auditorium, which was the finest floor in the DUSO League. The Kate Walton Field House is such a dazzling, modernistic layout that Messers. Gill and George Palmateer have jokingly remarked the opposition is dazzled by the lighting effects only.

Reunion Held For Undertakers Who Crashed 3797

St. Louis, Jan. 27 (AP)—It was 17 years ago tonight that a five-man bowling team rolled world record three-game score of 3,797. The record still stands.

Four members of the team—the Hermann Undertakers of St. Louis—held a reunion to celebrate tonight's anniversary and all thought their record will continue.

Jim (Buzz) Wilson, who was low man in the record total, said "I'll say no one breaks it. Look at me. I hit 709 (a pretty fair score) and I was the low man."

Ray Holmes, tops in the series with 792, added "we gave them something to shoot at and I don't think our record will be broken."

Also present at the reunion were Fred Taff (766) and Sam Garofalo (759). Missing was Bob Wills (771), now an army colonel last reported in Korea.

Langlois Screams 'We Wuz Robbed' After Turner Loss

Philadelphia, Jan. 27 (AP)—An old familar boxing echo resounded through the arena last night as Gil Turner whipped Pierre Langlois—"we wuz robbed."

Langlois, speaking in French, English and with gestures that even a member of the fight mob could understand, sat in his dressing room decrying the unanimous 5-4-1 verdict of the officials.

"I ween,' I ween," he repeated over and over again. "He foul me six times," said Pierre and he stripped to show what he claimed was a beet-red groin. This was the 14th defeat as against 63 victories and five draws for the 157½ pound Langlois.

Jean Bretonnel, chubby manager of the monsieur from Port Audemer in Normandy, was bathed in sweat, most of it created in the hectic moments after the fight when he jumped around screaming "No, no, no," and several French versions of the "we wuz robbed" routine.

The 7,168 fans—they paid $38,639—seemed to agree with Langlois, although the ringside experts did not. The fans booed, threw paper into the ring and bounced their chairs on the stone floor. Several fights broke out in the aisles. One woman picked a fight and got slugged for her efforts.

Knicks, Syracuse Gear for Series

(By The Associated Press)

The New York Knickerbockers and the Syracuse Nationals tangle in a three-game series, starting tomorrow, that could very well decide the Eastern division title in the National Basketball Association.

New York edged the Rochester Royals last night 74-71 while Syracuse triumphed over the Philadelphia Warriors 79-75 to remain four and one half games behind the Eastern division leaders.

The Knicks meet the Nationals at Syracuse on Thursday night. The teams play in New York on Saturday and return to Syracuse for the third game of the series on Sunday.

In other games last night, the Western division leaders, the Minneapolis Lakers, defeated the Milwaukee Hawks 84-69, and the Boston Celtics turned back the Baltimore Bullets 94-69.

Open Meeting Is Set On Crossing Problem

Port Ewen, Jan. 27 — Esopus Town Board will hold an open meeting Monday, Feb. 1, relative to the forthcoming public hearing concerning additional protection at grade crossings in the township.

Supervisor Edward R. Eckert of the Town of Esopus spoke recently before a group of citizens and outlined the board's objectives in attempting to have adequate warning lights installed at these crossings. "Many tragedies have been narrowly averted due to the inadequacy of the antiquated system at the Port Ewen crossing," Supervisor Eckert said, and added "traffic is exceptionally heavy over Salem street, particularly when the Callanan Road Improvement Company plant is in operation." He said this necessitated a modern warning system.

On Dec. 19, 1953, the Public Service Commission of the State of New York ordered a public hearing for Monday, Feb. 8, 1954, at 10 a. m. at the court house, Kingston. The particular crossing involved includes the one on Esopus avenue and Salem street, town of Esopus.

Supervisor Eckert has requested a large attendance at next Monday's open meeting. All organizations of the township are urged to send representatives.

Pugh Is Charged As Drunk Driver

Clyde Richard Pugh, 33, of 405 Hasbrouck avenue, was arrested at 9:59 p. m., yesterday by Officers Meyer Levy and John Crespino on Broadway near East Chester street on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Attorney Arthur A. Davis Jr., appeared for Pugh this morning before City Judge Raymond J. Mino, entered a plea of not guilty and the case was put over until Feb. 2. The defendant is under $100 bail.

Harrison Dart, Jr., 28, of 69 West Union street, was arrested at 1:05 a. m., today by Officers William Norton and Harold Bowers on a disorderly conduct charge following a complaint that a prowler was active on Pearl street. The case was put over to Thursday when he appeared in city court.

Dulles Asks Action

emphasized the American position and declared "it would be wrong if, having come together for the first time in five years, we should fritter away our time in discussing whether and how to set up a new conference rather than in dealing with the substantive problems (Germany and Austria) which the world expects us to solve."

"The United States therefore proposes," Dulles said, "that we should take no action on the first agenda item (the five-power conference) and pass on to the second (Germany and European security) and third (Austrian independence).

First Things First

"If we can solve these two problems, then, and then only, can we stand before the world as capable of assuming other and heavier tasks. Then there will be opened up vistas of new hope."

Molotov was expected to make his big play for American, British and French recognition of Red China.

Western diplomats wondered whether the Soviet foreign minister would offer peace settlements in the Far East as a price for such recognition.

American sources disclosed Molotov had decided against any speech in behalf of his Red China motion this afternoon, contrary to reports that he might make a lengthy declaration.

Instead, when chairman Eden asked the Russian if he had anything to say, Molotov replied simply that he had said yesterday all he needed to say on the subject.

Plays on Thin Ice

A boy playing on thawing ice in the Rondout creek in the area of Island Dock yesterday afternoon stirred considerable concern among those who saw him. Police headquarters was notified at 3:58 p. m., and was informed that someone attempted to chase the boy off the ice, but he refused to go. Officers Charles McCullough and Anthony Turck were dispatched there and reported that the boy had left the ice before they arrived.

Backs Dulles Stand

At his news conference, the President also:

1. Declared he is backing up the position of Secretary of State Dulles at the Berlin Big Four conference. That was in reply to a request for comment on Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov's demand for a Big Five parley, including Red China, on world problems. Dulles rejects that idea.

2. Said his associates at the Capitol tell him they still are hopeful a compromise on the controversial Bricker treaty-power amendment can be worked out.

3. Discussed the distinction, as he sees it, between the policies of his administration and the "New Deal" of the preceding Democratic administrations. He said his administration is politically liberal in dealing with individuals and conservative in dealing with economic and monetary matters.

A major difference can be cited, he added, simply by taking a look at the budget which he said shows his administration is reducing spending and that his predecessors went further and further into debt.

Right to Clear Charges

4. Asserted that Rep. Condon (D.-Calif.) has every right to clear himself of charges of subversion. Condon last year was refused permission to view atomic tests because of information the Atomic Energy Commission said it had received about him. The congressman has denied that he is or ever has been a Communist or a sympathizer. He is being given a hearing by the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

5. Declared a measure of humanity will be employed by the army in handling the case of Cpl. Edward S. Dickenson, the American former prisoner of war who first chose to remain with the Communists and then elected to return home. The army has started court martial proceedings against Dickenson on the ground that he had unlawful dealings with the enemy.

The President said, too, he is certain the armed forces will use sympathy in dealing with Americans who confessed under duress to engaging in germ warfare. The marine corps has ordered an inquiry into the case of Col. Frank H. Schwable, marine flier who while a prisoner signed a germ warfare confession which he renounced when released.

Talked With Wilson

Eisenhower said he was so disturbed when he read about the start of court martial proceedings against Dickenson that he got in touch with Secretary of Defense Wilson about the case.

6. Tagged as an idea worth looking into a reporter's suggestion that the administration adopt a method of giving something like honorable discharges to those who resign from the government without any suspicion that they might be security risks.

The reporter was Sarah McClendon, who represents a group of Texas papers. She suggested that a system similar to the army's be adopted so that there could be some indication whether the civilian discharges were honorable or dishonorable.

7. Declared with a trace of irritation that his new farm program, calling for a system of flexible price supports eventually, represents no basic change in his thinking. He added that he never promised during the presidential campaign to maintain price supports at a rigid 90 per cent of parity beyond the end of this year.

Will Send Message

8. Said he probably will send Congress a special message dealing with his recommendations on foreign trade. Those recommendations will be based, he said, in part on a report by his Special Study Commission and in part on an analysis of that study now being made by various government agencies.

The majority of that commission recommended extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act for three years with authority for the President to cut tariffs an additional 5 per cent in each of those years.

The President announced that Clarence Randall, who was chairman of the Foreign Trade Study Commission, is being retained as a White House consultant.

9. Said the administration abandoned plans to renew its call for a freeze of the 1½ per cent social security pay roll tax, because the 2 per cent rate now in effect will be needed to finance the expanded insurance program the administration advocates. The proposed expansion would bring an additional 10 million Americans under social security.

10. Declined comment on the latest talk between Secretary of State Dulles and Soviet Ambassador Zarubin on Eisenhower's proposal for creation of an international atomic pool for peaceful purposes. The President said he didn't know when there would be a report on that matter.

11. Commenting on the proposal of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Norwalk, Conn., to send the FBI the names of residents of that city deemed "Communist," said probably nothing can be done to stop such a program. But he added that there are libel and slander laws to take care of the situation if unwarranted accusations should be made.

Driver Complains Boys Climbed on Fuel Truck

Police were notified yesterday that youngsters in the area of School No. 4 had been climbing upon a moving gasoline trailer truck in the area of the school.

The police report at 3:34 p. m., said Edwin J. Hoyt, of 129 Jansen avenue, driver for the Socony Company, complained that the boys climbed aboard on Delaware avenue as he approached Abruyn street while he was changing gear. They got upon the side and rear of the vehicle, he said, and he feared someone might get injured.

Patrolmen were instructed to be in the area between 3 and 3:45 p. m., to stop the practice, and R. H. Van Valkenburgh, principal of School No. 4, was notified and said he would cooperate to prevent recurrences.

Bates Will Dance In Onteora Show For Polio Fund

It was announced today by Harold Wilkins, March of Dimes chairman of the Town of Olive, that the variety show in Onteora School auditorium, Friday night, will feature Peg Leg Bates, stage, screen and television star, who will do the dance that made him famous in all parts of the U. S. and Europe.

"We feel fortunate in having Bates on our program," Wilkins said, "along with volunteers from our own town, Kingston and other communities of the county."

Bates, who has a resort at Kerhonkson, is giving his services free, and when he promised to dance he said, "Fighting polio is one of the finest things that could be done to protect our youngsters and I hope Ulster goes over its quota."

The county figure is $50,000.

Lone Thug Gets $100

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—A lone thug held up Morris Plancher only a few yards from his home at 2769 Matthews avenue, the Bronx, last night and fled with $100, police reported. Plancher, 55-year-old fruit and vegetable dealer, said the robber did not display a weapon but merely ordered him to hand over his money.

Find Rich Beggars

Tokyo, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Welfare Ministry made a random sampling today of "disabled" Japanese war veterans begging in the streets and found most of them could pass an army physical with ease. Furthermore, almost all of them had money in the bank. Kyodo News Agency reported one beggar had about $3,000 and savings averaged $125.

Association Holds Lawyers Should Not Give Stories

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—A committee of the New York State Bar Assn. recommends the amending of the State Civil Rights Law to make it unlawful in any criminal case for anyone officially connected with the case to make public certain information.

The ban would apply to defense and prosecution attorneys and others officially involved in the case.

Amending of the law was recommended yesterday by the association's committee on civil rights. The group held that in some cases fair trial is jeopardized by the tremendous growth of mass media of communications.

In a report, the committee said there was a growing conflict between two constitutional rights—the guarantees of a fair trial and of freedom of the press.

A draft of the proposed amendment will be submitted at the state association's annual meeting, which is being held here today through Saturday.

Terms of Ban

The draft would:

Ban anything that might prevent a fair trial, improperly, influence the court or jury, or in any manner tend to interfere with the administration of justice.

Prohibit any disclosure of the acts or conduct of the accused other than in the official formal charge, any statements or admissions allegedly made by him, and alleged prior convictions.

It would apply to any case pending in the criminal courts of New York state or to any person charged with crime and in custody of public authorities whether before or after indictment.

The only exception would be when disclosure was authorized by the court.

To remove paint stains, use gasoline or turpentine; denatured alcohol will remove lacquer, shellac, or varnish stains.

Thinks Reds Lead U. S.

Midland, Tex., Jan. 27 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle says "it is extremely likely that the Soviets are ahead of us in the development of the long-range ballistic missile." The famed Tokyo raider, now an oil company executive, told the Midland Chamber of Commerce last night the fate of civilization may depend on a perfection of guided missiles. "As a result of their own intensive efforts," he said, "together with what they took from the Germans, who during World War 2 led in this field, it is extremely likely that the Soviets are ahead of us in the development of the long-range ballistic missile."

More rain, snow and sleet pelted wide areas in the eastern third of the country and in the far west again today.

The rain and snow in the eastern belt extended from the Great Lakes region and Ohio valley northeast and through most of Pennsylvania, New York and the New England states. The snow hit the western Great Lakes region with heaviest amounts of 2 to 4 inches over southern Wisconsin, eastern Iowa and northern Illinois. Some sleet also was reported in midwest areas.

Snow continued in sections of the northern Rockies extending westward to a rain area along the Pacific coast which spread from northern California northward through Washington.

There was some drizzle along the Gulf coast but skies were generally clear in the south central and southwest and most of the Rocky Mountain region.

Commercial Exhibits Featured at Horticulture Show

Wide-eyed youngster watches machine bag apples in transparent containers at 156th Field Artillery Battalion armory, Manor avenue where the eastern meeting of the New York State Horticultural Society is being held for three days, ending Friday. Other farm machinery, which lightens the tasks of growers, is also on exhibit, including tractors like the giant model and smaller one shown here. (Freeman photo) room opening off the main drill shed.

Chapman Says

Lunches are served in the basement of the armory by National Guard units.

At its annual meeting last week at Rochester the 99-year-old New York State Horticultural Society, adopted resolutions outlining its stand on various problems. These resolutions will be read to the approximately one-half the society's memmbership that attends the eastern meeting, and additional resolutions may be proposed from the floor. The resolutions adopted include:

1. Approval of the 1954 legislative program of the New York Conference Board of Farm Organizations.

2. Request that Congress take action to stabilize prices to growers of tree fruit for processing, to eliminate what it termed the "panicky situation" that sometimes occurs during harvest season. The resolution suggested the Secretary of Agriculture be authorized to purchase up to one-half the individual current packs whenever farm price of tree fruit for processing below 60 per cent of parity. It asked the program be designed to raise the price "to at least 75 per cent of parity."

3. A request that the Department of Agriculture and eastern college continue research on rate of movement of apples in retail stores; and that the continue merchandising studies such as conducted last year at Pittsburg and extend the studies to other large markets.

4. A resolution in favor of allowing migrant agriculture laborers a period of 120 days in New York state without a state operator's license of registration, provided they are properly licensed in the state they come from.

5. Request for annual reports on tree plantings and removals for apple, peach, cherry and pear trees, instead or in addition to the five-year census.

Other Resolutions

Other resolutions passed by the society commended the Weather Bureau for its "splendid cooperation" in providing weather information and asked continued appropriations for that purpose; expressed appreciation to Cornell and Geneva research and extension staffs; asked increased appropriation for non-professional aid to research staff at Geneva; honored Prof. Richard Wellington on his retirement from the Geneva experiment station staff; atnd memorialized the deaths of Dr. Percival J. Parrott, former director of the Geneva station, and G. Herbert McClew, past president of the society.

Lack of agreement forced the tabling of one recommended resolution which would have asked Congress to forbid imports of a farm product when domestic farm prices of that product falls below 75 per cent of parity.

Exams Announced By Civil Service

The U. S. Civil Service Commission today announced the following examinations:

Nurse anesthetist, $4,620 and $5,810 a year, for work at various locations throughout the country and in the Panama Canal Zone; social worker, parole, $4,205 and instructor, trade ships, vocational agriculture, industrial arts or general shop, related trades and general education, $3,795 for duty in Federal penal and correctional institutions throughout the United States.

No written tests are required. Further information may be secured from the commission's local examiner in charge, William P. Barry, main post office, Kingston.

Method to Use Atoms for Useful Electricity Cited

New York, Jan. 27 (AP) — A new method of converting the rays from radioactive atoms directly into useful electricity has been announced by the Radio Corp. of America.

The discovery may one day provide a matchbox-size power unit good for 20 years for lighting homes, running refrigerators and radios and television sets. It also might run hearing aids and wristwatch radios or be a nearly permanent battery for automobiles.

David Sarnoff, RCA board chairman, announced the discovery yesterday.

It is a little battery smaller than the filter tips of a cigarette. Rays coming from a few salt grains of "cheap" radioactive atoms, which do not split, are turned into electric current.

The discovery is a big short-cut for atomic peacetime power. Other methods have been used in the past to turn the locked-up energy of atoms directly into electricity, but this one is more efficient and thousands of times more powerful.

Run On Heat

Until now, atomic power plants —like that in the new A-Sub— have been run on heat from splitting atoms, with the heat making steam to generate electricity. Heavy equipment and shielding are required in these plants.

However, the battery unveiled yesterday is tiny, with its power coming from an almost invisible amount of radio-active strontium, a natural element.

Strontium-90, a waste product formed in atomic reactors when uranium-235 atoms split, was used in the battery. This strontium constantly shoots out radiation of several billion electrons each second. The battery makes each of these electrons give birth to 200,000 more electrons.

Race Through Wafer

Electrons from the strontium race through a silicon wafer, each knocking loose 200,000 electrons from atoms of silicon. The electrons flow out as current.

Only enough current — a millionth of a watt—was produced in the experimental battery. A telegraph key was connected. And Sarnoff, once a Morse code operator, tapped out a pioneer message with electricity obtained by the direct conversion of atomic energy. It read:

"Atoms for peace. Man is still the greatest miracle and the greatest problem on this earth."

The experimental battery is good for 20 years since it takes that long for the strontium to lose half its power. Although so tiny it is almost invisible, the strontium-90 in the battery costs $25. Sarnoff said with high demand for it, the cost could be reduced to a few cents.

The answers to everyday insurance problems*
By HERMAN J. EATON

QUESTION: I carry many different kinds of insurance and I believe the amounts are more than adequate. Why, then, do I hear all this talk about having a complete survey made of my entire insurance program?

ANSWER: Regardless of the number and the amounts of the insurance policies you own, a really competent insurance agent can probably find many cases of duplicate coverage of the same risk and bad risks against which you are not protected at all. The usual result from an expert survey is the saving of many dollars to the client.

* If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office we'll try to give you the correct answers and there will be NO CHARGE or OBLIGATION OF ANY KIND.

Backs Dulles Stand

At his news conference, the President also:

1. Declared he is backing up the position of Secretary of State Dulles at the Berlin Big Four conference. That was in reply to a request for comment on Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov's demand for a Big Five parley, including Red China, on world problems. Dulles rejects that idea.

2. Said his associates at the Capitol tell him they still are hopeful a compromise on the controversial Bricker treaty-power amendment can be worked out.

3. Discussed the distinction, as he sees it, between the policies of his administration and the "New Deal" of the preceding Democratic administrations. He said his administration is politically liberal in dealing with individuals and conservative in dealing with economic and monetary matters.

A major difference can be cited, he added, simply by taking a look at the budget which he said shows his administration is reducing spending and that his predecessors went further and further into debt.

Right to Clear Charges

4. Asserted that Rep. Condon (D.-Calif.) has every right to clear himself of charges of subversion. Condon last year was refused permission to view atomic tests because of information the Atomic Energy Commission said it had received about him. The congressman has denied that he is or ever has been a Communist or a sympathizer. He is being given a hearing by the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

5. Declared a measure of humanity will be employed by the army in handling the case of Cpl. Edward S. Dickenson, the American former prisoner of war who first chose to remain with the Communists and then elected to return home. The army has started court martial proceedings against Dickenson on the ground that he had unlawful dealings with the enemy.

The President said, too, he is certain the armed forces will use sympathy in dealing with Americans who confessed under duress to engaging in germ warfare. The marine corps has ordered an inquiry into the case of Col. Frank H. Schwable, marine flier who while a prisoner signed a germ warfare confession which he renounced when released.

Talked With Wilson

Eisenhower said he was so disturbed when he read about the start of court martial proceedings against Dickenson that he got in touch with Secretary of Defense Wilson about the case.

6. Tagged as an idea worth looking into a reporter's suggestion that the administration adopt a method of giving something like honorable discharges to those who resign from the government without any suspicion that they might be security risks.

The reporter was Sarah McClendon, who represents a group of Texas papers. She suggested that a system similar to the army's be adopted so that there could be some indication whether the civilian discharges were honorable or dishonorable.

7. Declared with a trace of irritation that his new farm program, calling for a system of flexible price supports eventually, represents no basic change in his thinking. He added that he never promised during the presidential campaign to maintain price supports at a rigid 90 per cent of parity beyond the end of this year.

Will Send Message

8. Said he probably will send Congress a special message dealing with his recommendations on foreign trade. Those recommendations will be based, he said, in part on a report by his Special Study Commission and in part on an analysis of that study now being made by various government agencies.

The majority of that commission recommended extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act for three years with authority for the President to cut tariffs an additional 5 per cent in each of those years.

The President announced that Clarence Randall, who was chairman of the Foreign Trade Study Commission, is being retained as a White House consultant.

9. Said the administration abandoned plans to renew its call for a freeze of the 1½ per cent social security pay roll tax, because the 2 per cent rate now in effect will be needed to finance the expanded insurance program the administration advocates. The proposed expansion would bring an additional 10 million Americans under social security.

10. Declined comment on the latest talk between Secretary of State Dulles and Soviet Ambassador Zarubin on Eisenhower's proposal for creation of an international atomic pool for peaceful purposes. The President said he didn't know when there would be a report on that matter.

11. Commenting on the proposal of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Norwalk, Conn., to send the FBI the names of residents of that city deemed "Communist," said probably nothing can be done to stop such a program. But he added that there are libel and slander laws to take care of the situation if unwarranted accusations should be made.

Driver Complains Boys Climbed on Fuel Truck

Police were notified yesterday that youngsters in the area of School No. 4 had been climbing upon a moving gasoline trailer truck in the area of the school.

The police report at 3:34 p. m., said Edwin J. Hoyt, of 129 Jansen avenue, driver for the Socony Company, complained that the boys climbed aboard on Delaware avenue as he approached Abruyn street while he was changing gear. They got upon the side and rear of the vehicle, he said, and he feared someone might get injured.

Patrolmen were instructed to be in the area between 3 and 3:45 p. m., to stop the practice, and R. H. Van Valkenburgh, principal of School No. 4, was notified and said he would cooperate to prevent recurrences.

Bates Will Dance In Onteora Show For Polio Fund

It was announced today by Harold Wilkins, March of Dimes chairman of the Town of Olive, that the variety show in Onteora School auditorium, Friday night, will feature Peg Leg Bates, stage, screen and television star, who will do the dance that made him famous in all parts of the U. S. and Europe.

"We feel fortunate in having Bates on our program," Wilkins said, "along with volunteers from our own town, Kingston and other communities of the county."

Bates, who has a resort at Kerhonkson, is giving his services free, and when he promised to dance he said, "Fighting polio is one of the finest things that could be done to protect our youngsters and I hope Ulster goes over its quota."

The county figure is $50,000.

Lone Thug Gets $100

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—A lone thug held up Morris Plancher only a few yards from his home at 2769 Matthews avenue, the Bronx, last night and fled with $100, police reported. Plancher, 55-year-old fruit and vegetable dealer, said the robber did not display a weapon but merely ordered him to hand over his money.

Find Rich Beggars

Tokyo, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Welfare Ministry made a random sampling today of "disabled" Japanese war veterans begging in the streets and found most of them could pass an army physical with ease. Furthermore, almost all of them had money in the bank. Kyodo News Agency reported one beggar had about $3,000 and savings averaged $125.

Association Holds Lawyers Should Not Give Stories

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—A committee of the New York State Bar Assn. recommends the amending of the State Civil Rights Law to make it unlawful in any criminal case for anyone officially connected with the case to make public certain information.

The ban would apply to defense and prosecution attorneys and others officially involved in the case.

Amending of the law was recommended yesterday by the association's committee on civil rights. The group held that in some cases fair trial is jeopardized by the tremendous growth of mass media of communications.

In a report, the committee said there was a growing conflict between two constitutional rights—the guarantees of a fair trial and of freedom of the press.

A draft of the proposed amendment will be submitted at the state association's annual meeting, which is being held here today through Saturday.

Terms of Ban

The draft would:

Ban anything that might prevent a fair trial, improperly influence the court or jury, or in any manner tend to interfere with the administration of justice.

Prohibit any disclosure of the acts or conduct of the accused other than in the official formal charge, any statements or admissions allegedly made by him, and alleged prior convictions.

It would apply to any case pending in the criminal courts of New York state or to any person charged with crime and in custody of public authorities whether before or after indictment.

The only exception would be when disclosure was authorized by the court.

To remove paint stains, use gasoline or turpentine; denatured alcohol will remove lacquer, shellac, or varnish stains.

Thinks Reds Lead U. S.

Midland, Tex., Jan. 27 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle says "it is extremely likely that the Soviets are ahead of us in the development of the long-range ballistic missile." The famed Tokyo raider, now an oil company executive, told the Midland Chamber of Commerce last night the fate of civilization may depend on a perfection of guided missiles. "As a result of their own intensive efforts," he said, "together with what they took from the Germans, who during World War 2 led in this field, it is extremely likely that the Soviets are ahead of us in the development of the long-range ballistic missile."

Pugh Is Charged As Drunk Driver

Clyde Richard Pugh, 33, of 405 Hasbrouck avenue, was arrested at 9:59 p. m., yesterday by Officers Meyer Levy and John Crespino on Broadway near East Chester street on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Attorney Arthur A. Davis Jr., appeared for Pugh this morning before City Judge Raymond J. Mino, entered a plea of not guilty and the case was put over until Feb. 2. The defendant is under $100 bail.

S. James Matthews appeared for the district attorney's office.

Harrison Dart, Jr., 28, of 69 West Union street, was arrested at 1:05 a. m., today by Officers William Norton and Harold Bowers on a disorderly conduct charge following a complaint that a prowler was active on Pearl street. The case was put over to Thursday when he appeared in city court.

Dulles Asks Action

emphasized the American position and declared "it would be wrong if, having come together for the first time in five years, we should fritter away our time in discussing whether and how to set up a new conference rather than in dealing with the substantive problems (Germany and Austria) which the world expects us to solve."

"The United States therefore proposes," Dulles said, "that we should take no action on the first agenda item (the five-power conference) and pass on to the second (Germany and European security) and third (Austrian independence).

First Things First

"If we can solve these two problems, then, and then only, can we stand before the world as capable of assuming other and heavier tasks. Then there will be opened up vistas of new hope."

Molotov was expected to make his big play for American, British and French recognition of Red China.

Western diplomats wondered whether the Soviet foreign minister would offer peace settlements in the Far East as a price for such recognition.

American sources disclosed Molotov had decided against any speech in behalf of his Red China motion this afternoon, contrary to reports that he might make a lengthy declaration.

Instead, when chairman Eden asked the Russian if he had anything to say, Molotov replied simply that he had said yesterday all he needed to say on the subject.

Plays on Thin Ice

A boy playing on thawing ice in the Rondout creek in the area of Island Dock yesterday afternoon stirred considerable concern among those who saw him. Police headquarters was notified at 3:58 p. m., and was informed that someone attempted to chase the boy off the ice, but he refused to go. Officers Charles McCullough and Anthony Turck were dispatched there and reported that the boy had left the ice before they arrived.

Few Eastern Areas Have More Snow, Rain, Sleet

(By The Associated Press)

More rain, snow and sleet pelted wide areas in the eastern third of the country and in the far west again today.

The rain and snow in the eastern belt extended from the Great Lakes region and Ohio valley northeast and through most of Pennsylvania, New York and the New England states. The snow hit the western Great Lakes region with heaviest amounts of 2 to 4 inches over southern Wisconsin, eastern Iowa and northern Illinois. Some sleet also was reported in midwest areas.

Snow continued in sections of the northern Rockies extending westward to a rain area along the Pacific coast which spread from northern California northward through Washington.

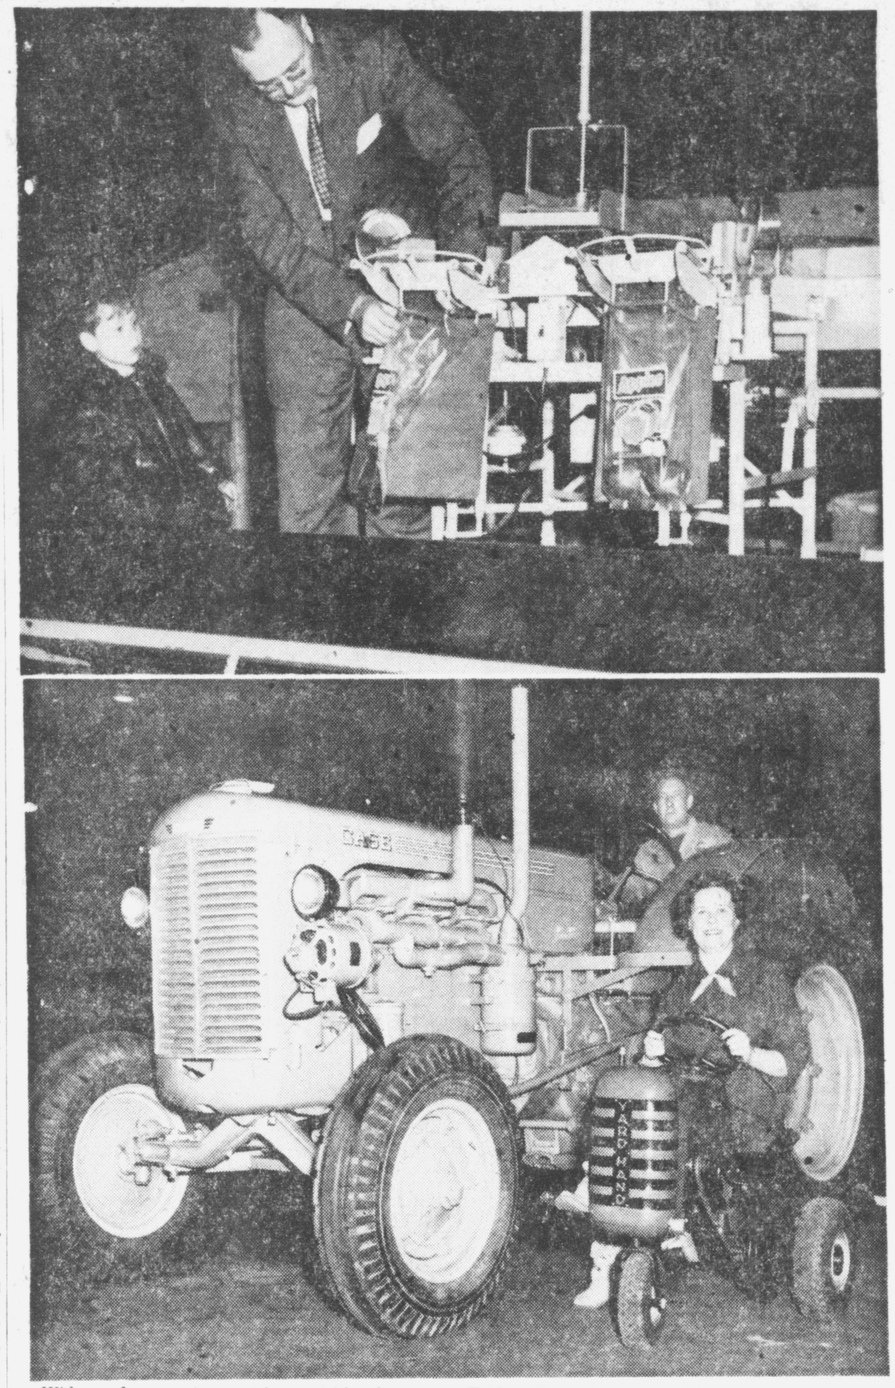

There was some drizzle along the Gulf coast but skies were generally clear in the south central and southwest and most of the Rocky Mountain region.

Mild weather continued in the eastern southern section of the country but colder air moved south and eastward into the central plains and central Mississippi Valley. More sub-zero weather was reported in the northern Rockies and northern plains, while temperatures were around seasonal levels in the far west.

Commercial Exhibits Featured at Horticulture Show

Wide-eyed youngster watches machine bag apples in transparent containers at 156th Field Artillery Battalion armory, Manor avenue where the eastern meeting of the New York State Horticultural Society is being held for three days, ending Friday. Other farm machinery, which lightens the tasks of growers, is also on exhibit, including tractors like the giant model and smaller one shown here. (Freeman photo)

At its annual meeting last week at Rochester the 99-year-old New York State Horticultural Society, adopted resolutions outlining its stand on various problems. These resolutions will be read to the approximately one-half the society's memmbership that attends the eastern meeting, and additional resolutions may be proposed from the floor. The resolutions adopted include:

1. Approval of the 1954 legislative program of the New York Conference Board of Farm Organizations.

2. Request that Congress take action to stabilize prices to growers of tree fruit for processing, to eliminate what it termed the "panicky situation" that sometimes occurs during harvest season. The resolution suggested the Secretary of Agriculture be authorized to purchase up to one-half the individual current packs whenever farm price of tree fruit for processing below 60 per cent of parity. It asked the program be designed to raise the price "to at least 75 per cent of parity."

3. A request that the Department of Agriculture and eastern college continue research on rate of movement of apples in retail stores; and that the continue merchandising studies such as conducted last year at Pittsburg and extend the studies to other large markets.

4. A resolution in favor of allowing migrant agriculture laborers a period of 120 days in New York state without a state operator's license of registration, provided they are properly licensed in the state they come from.

5. Request for annual reports on tree plantings and removals for apple, peach, cherry and pear trees, instead or in addition to the five-year census.

Other Resolutions

Other resolutions passed by the society commended the Weather Bureau for its "splendid cooperation" in providing weather information and asked continued appropriations for that purpose; expressed appreciation to Cornell and Geneva research and extension staffs; asked increased appropriation for non-professional aid to research staff at Geneva; honored Prof. Richard Wellington on his retirement from the Geneva experiment station staff; atnd memorialized the deaths of Dr. Percival J. Parrott, former director of the Geneva station, and G. Herbert McClew, past president of the society.

Lack of agreement forced the tabling of one recommended resolution which would have asked Congress to forbid imports of a farm product when domestic farm prices of that product falls below 75 per cent of parity.

Exams Announced By Civil Service

The U. S. Civil Service Commission today announced the following examinations:

Nurse anesthetist, $4,620 and $5,810 a year, for work at various locations throughout the country and in the Panama Canal Zone; social worker, parole, $4,205 and instructor, trade ships, vocational agriculture, industrial arts or general shop, related trades and general education, $3,795 for duty in Federal penal and correctional institutions throughout the United States.

No written tests are required. Further information may be secured from the commission's local examiner in charge, William P. Barry, main post office, Kingston.

Method to Use Atoms for Useful Electricity Cited

New York, Jan. 27 (AP) — A new method of converting the rays from radioactive atoms directly into useful electricity has been announced by the Radio Corp. of America.

The discovery may one day provide a matchbox-size power unit good for 20 years for lighting homes, running refrigerators and radios and television sets. It also might run hearing aids and wristwatch radios or be a nearly permanent battery for automobiles.

David Sarnoff, RCA board chairman, announced the discovery yesterday.

It is a little battery smaller than the filter tips of a cigarette. Rays coming from a few salt grains of "cheap" radioactive atoms, which do not split, are turned into electric current.

The discovery is a big short-cut for atomic peacetime power. Other methods have been used in the past to turn the locked-up energy of atoms directly into electricity, but this one is more efficient and thousands of times more powerful.

Run On Heat

Until now, atomic power plants —like that in the new A-Sub— have been run on heat from splitting atoms, with the heat making steam to generate electricity. Heavy equipment and shielding are required in these plants.

However, the battery unveiled yesterday is tiny, with its power coming from an almost invisible amount of radio-active strontium, a natural element.

Strontium-90, a waste product formed in atomic reactors when uranium-235 atoms split, was used in the battery. This strontium constantly shoots out radiation of several billion electrons each second. The battery makes each of these electrons give birth to 200,000 more electrons.

Race Through Wafer

Electrons from the strontium race through a silicon wafer, each knocking loose 200,000 electrons from atoms of silicon. The electrons flow out as current.

Only enough current — a millionth of a watt—was produced in the experimental battery. A telegraph key was connected. And Sarnoff, once a Morse code operator, tapped out a pioneer message with electricity obtained by the direct conversion of atomic energy. It read:

"Atoms for peace. Man is still the greatest miracle and the greatest problem on this earth."

The experimental battery is good for 20 years since it takes that long for the strontium to lose half its power. Although so tiny it is almost invisible, the strontium-90 in the battery costs $25. Sarnoff said with high demand for it, the cost could be reduced to a few cents.

Second Post Lost

Saigon, Indochina, Jan. 27 (AP) —The French today admitted the loss of a second post east of Seno, in central Laos, to the Communist-led Vietminh. The French high command announced the rebels had taken Muong Phine, 90 miles east of Seno. Last night the French revealed the loss of Muong Pha Lane, 40 miles east of Seno, the main French fortress in Laos.

The answers to everyday insurance problems*
By HERMAN J. EATON

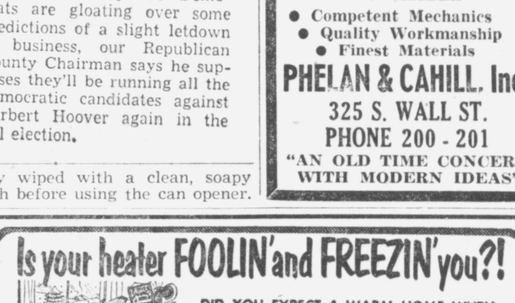

QUESTION: I carry many different kinds of insurance and I believe the amounts are more than adequate. Why, then, do I hear all this talk about having a complete survey made of my entire insurance program?
ANSWER: Regardless of the number and the amounts of the insurance policies you own, a really competent insurance agent can probably find many cases of duplicate coverage of the same risk and bad risks against which you are not protected at all. The usual result from an expert survey is the saving of many dollars to the client.
* If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office we'll try to give you the correct answers and there will be NO CHARGE or OBLIGATION OF ANY KIND.
